Limit Arms To Unshackle World Trade, Hull Urges

World Must Renew Useful Commerce, He Says, Quoting President on Policy

Business and Spending

MORE THAN 1,000 retailers assembled here are expecting to hear from President Roosevelt tonight an attack on business opposition to policies of the New Deal. Page 3.

THE GOVERNMENT SPENDING issue was thrust to the fore in the legislative situation, with Senator Vandenberg hitting at mounting expenditures and Senator Minton scoffing at fears of "bankruptcy." Page 3.

World Trade and Arms

By William V. Nessly.

Secretary of State Hull declared last night there "must be an agreement that will limit and ultimately lessen creation of armaments" in the world.

He made the declaration as he read a message from President Roosevelt, inaugurating the Nation's Foreign Trade Week, in which Mr. Roosevelt said that "pacific intercourse" is "the dominant purpose of the foreign policy of the United States."

"There must be a return," Secretary Hull said, "to the determination not to resort to war as a means of settling grievances. There must be an end to the attempt to substitute for fair discussion the threat of stronger arms."

Impatient at "Disquiet"

With these accomplishments, he said, the course for which this country is working calls for trade and economic arrangements between nations "that will redound to the great material benefit of all."

Plainly evidencing his impatience at those powers that have brought "a desperate disquiet" into the affairs of nations, he called for replacement of rulers' pride in "the number of their tanks or bombing planes" by previous pride "in the freedom and serenity of their people, their moral and spiritual progress, in the learning of their scholars, and in the gifts of their artists."

President Roosevelt's message said:

"Tomorrow, May 22, we are celebrating the opening of Foreign Trade Week; and also National Maritime Day. For us, this is an affirmation of purpose and of faith. These celebrations have to do with works of peace: the beneficial exchange of goods; traffic of merchant ships on many seas; the friendly development of commerce. Pacific intercourse is still the ideal of most of the world. It is the dominant purpose of the foreign policy of the United States. Our hope and aims are that peaceful interchange shall again become the normal state of affairs.

Must Import Also

"In carrying out this intention, we have a right to expect breadth of vision from all groups in our own country. Increased foreign trade yields large dividends in terms of economic well-being and friendly relations with other nations; but to secure it there must be fair exchange. We must take, as well as give; import, as well as export. We shall profit by doing so.

"For nearly five years, now, we have been engaged in a vigorous effort to expand our foreign trade by means of reciprocal trade agreements, based upon the principle of equality of treatment, for the reduction of excessive trade barriers. This effort has been gratifyingly successful, despite many obstacles. Almost 60 per cent of our total foreign trade is now carried on with countries with which we have concluded agreements. By continued vigorous effort we can make of this essential part of our general program for recovery in the United States an even more effective means of promoting the general welfare.

"To you who are engaged in foreign commerce, I extend cordial greetings."

Hull declared that facts "make hollow the repeated declamations

British Rulers to Meet 5 Queens Today—the Dionne Quintuplets

King's Famous Wards, Intent On Shiny Auto, Indicate They May Take Royalty in Stride

By Edward T. Folliard

Aboard Royal Pilot Train, May 21.—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth tonight are headed for Toronto, where tomorrow they will hold court for the world's most famous sisters—the Dionne quintuplets.

Some of the Englishmen in the royal party are baffled by all this excitement over the meeting of the British sovereigns and the five little queens of Callander.

What they don't know is that the Dionne girls, who will be 5 years old on May 28, attract 250,000 tourists a year, 70 per cent of them from the United States. These tourists spend $1,000,000 in United States currency in the summer months. How much they spend in Canadian money it is impossible to estimate.

As the King and Queen were speeding toward Toronto in their blue and gold special train, the Dionnes were traveling toward Canada's second largest city in a special of their own—the Quintland. It is made up of a dining car, a standard sleeping car, and air-conditioned coach and a baggage car.

Eight quarts of milk were taken aboard the Quintland at Callander and more was to be obtained at Toronto. Also there was special chlorinated water to guard the little girls—who are the wards of the Canadian War Veterans Slap Monarch on Back as Sovereigns Mingle in Throng of 60,000

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ottawa, Ontario, May 21.—Their Brittanic Majesties, whose friendly demeanor already has thrilled Canada, today chose a solemn moment in current Canadian history to brush all ceremony aside in the most human gesture of their tour.

Before 60,000 men and women, including several thousand maroon-beretted Canadian veterans, King George VI dedicated the National War Memorial. Ranked 10 deep from the royal dais stood the veterans, no longer the young fellows who marched off to England's aid in 1914.

After the King had completed his brief address, the veterans found Their Majesties among them. There was nothing premeditated about it; the King and Queen, spontaneously and with no signal to their train of dignitaries and detectives, simply waded out into that silent maroon sea, hands outstretched, faces wreathed in smiles.

It happened so suddenly that veterans and dignitaries and detectives alike were caught for the moment flatfooted. Then, while detectives and scarlet-coated Mounties battled to reach their appointed places beside Their Majesties and while the official train struggled to catch up, the King and Queen met and mingled with their subjects on

Congress Will Curb 'Isms, Says Bankhead

Speaker Talks at Annual Rites of Massing of Colors

Congress will soon enact legislation to wipe out "sinister and mischievous forces" which are trying to undermine the American form of government, Speaker William H. Bankhead assured more than 5,000 people here yesterday.

Addressing the Military Order of the World War's annual massing of the colors service on the green slopes of the Washington Cathedral amphitheater, he warned that "there is no place anywhere upon our soil to harbor such activities or condone their malevolence."

"It may be well to remind these subversive agents, regardless of either their origin or sponsors, that the benevolence of our guarantees of speech and assembly have very definite limitations," he said. "I am happy to report that Congress is diligently diagnosing the diseased tissue in our body politic and in due course will enact adequate remedies for its extirpation."

Their 400 flags and organization banners shimmering in the bright sun, more than 700 veterans and members of patriotic and civic organizations opened the annual service, sponsored by the Military Order of the World War, by marching down the Cathedral steps to tree-sheltered seats in one corner of the rustic sanctuary. There they heard Speaker Bankhead describe the massing of the colors as symbolic

Woman Drowns As Husband Tries To Rescue Her

A Washington woman was drowned yesterday in the Patapsco River, Baltimore, as her husband attempted to save her, the Associated Press reported.

The drowning victim was Mrs. Beatrice Lawson, 29, of 2811 Fourteenth street northwest. With her husband, Lee Lawson, 30, and a friend, they had been catching crabs

Mrs. Lawson dived into the water for a swim, and suddenly sank. Lawson dived for her in vain.

Three Killed Trying to Save Dairy Hand in Gas-Filled Well

By the Associated Press.

Blackwell, Okla., May 21.—Four men died and three others were overcome today in a gas-filled well at a dairy near here.

Lowell Curry, 28-year-old dairy worker, had climbed to a platform halfway down the 30-foot well to repair a pump when gas fumes overcame him and he toppled 6 feet into the water.

Aaron Briggs, 49, coowner of the dairy; his son, Napier, 19; and John Pennewell, 22, all lost their lives while attempting rescues.

Two firemen and a policeman were overcome but were pulled from the well and revived.

Napier Briggs tried to rescue Curry but he, too, was overcome and plunged into the water.

His father and Pennewell climbed down the well. Pennewell began to feel the effects of the gas and started back out, but fell back across the pump.

Hearing Briggs' shouts for help, two other employes, Forrest Law, 26, and Bill Minihan, 19, started into the well but were ordered by Briggs to summon aid instead.

Minihan called an ambulance, doctors and the fire department, but before they arrived the four men were dead.

Clipper Completes First Air Mail Flight to Europe

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Portugal, May 21.—The Yankee Clipper completed its first scheduled commercial flight across the Atlantic in 20 hours and 14 minutes flying time today, alighting on the Tagus River at 7:42 p. m., G. M. T. (2:42 p. m., Eastern standard time).

With 16 crewmen and observers aboard, the huge four-motored flying boat slipped to the water just at sunset. It started its flight from New York at 12:08 p. m., Eastern standard time yesterday.

A stop of 6 hours and 19 minutes had been made at Horta, the Azores.

Chief Steward William McKittrick remained at Horta, leaving 16 persons to complete the flight to Lisbon, which is expected to pave the way for regular passenger air travel about July 1.

J. Carroll Cone, Atlantic division manager of Pan-American Airways, on the leg from Horta conversed by radiotelephone with Maj. Lester Gardner, former secretary of the Institute of Aeronautical Science, and Dr. George Lewis, director of the National Aviation Commission, passengers aboard the eastbound steamer Washington.

The clipper was then 600 miles from Horta and the Washington about 200 miles north. Cone said he believed it was the first time a passenger on a commercial ocean plane had talked with passengers on a steamer.

3 Die as Army Plane Crashes Into Lick Observatory

San Jose, Calif., May 21 (AP).—Lost in thick fog, an Army airplane crashed into the Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton tonight, killing the pilot and at least two other persons.

The pilot was identified as W. E. Scott of March Field, Riverside, Calif. Two other bodies were found in the wreckage.

The Army ship struck the observatory administration building, smashed through two 18-inch brick walls and wrecked offices and archives containing photographic plates and other records the observatory had been collecting for 30 years.

Gasoline from the plane's tanks flowed over the observatory's hallways, hampering those trying to reach the bodies.

Two men, one aspiring to fly transport planes, were killed and a young man and his 15-year-old sister were seriously injured in two airplane crashes yesterday in suburban Prince Georges County, Md.

Floyd Scott, 20, of 1513 L street northwest, who planned to enroll next fall in the University of Maryland's two-year flying course, was killed when his second-hand biplane spun into the ground at Suitland Airport, three miles from the District line.

His passenger, Joseph Ryan, 36, of Piney Grove, Md., died before reaching Casualty Hospital. Witnesses said the 1931 plane, purchased by Scott in March, crashed while executing a vertical turn over the field.

Girl, Brother Injured

At Queens Chapel Airport just across the District line, Margaret Anne Griffith, 15, and her brother, John Griffith, 24, of 920 Longfellow street northwest, were injured when a sightseeing plane in which they were passengers made a forced landing in a clump of woods. William Kramer, 22, of Mount Rainier, Md., the pilot, escaped with face bruises.

At Casualty Hospital, Miss Griffith was said to be in critical condition with a possible skull fracture, compound fracture of the left leg and severe lacerations of the face. Her brother was in serious condition with concussion of the brain, fractured left ankle and cuts.

Young Scott was a graduate of Central High School and had been flying since he was 14, his mother, Mrs. Ruby Long, said. She added he held an amateur pilot license and had 153 hours of flying time.

Ryan was employed as a bricklayer until two years ago, when his left arm was amputated after being shattered by a charge of buckshot. He lived on Walker Mill road in Piney Grove.

CAA Examines Wreck

Besides his mother, Scott is survived by a sister, Mrs. Ellsworth Seaman, of Washington; another sister, Mrs. E. H. King, of Houston, Tex., and two half-brothers, Leonard C. Whitsett and J. H. Whitsett, both of Washington.

Walker S. Stapler, of the Air Safety Board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, said a board investigator examined the plane immediately after the accident and questioned witnesses and reported no structural or engine failure could be determined. He said the license numbers had been partly stripped away by souvenir seekers.

Miss Griffith, her brother and Kramer were hurt a few moments after taking off from Queens Chapel Airport on a routine sightseeing flight. Witnesses said the plane's engine faltered immediately after the take-off and Kramer landed in the trees to avoid a more serious crash had he attempted to return to the field. The plane's left wing was torn off.

Britain Reported To Have Conceded Full Military Alliance to Soviet

By the Associated Press

Geneva, May 21.—Great Britain was understood today to have swung toward the Soviet Russian demand for a three-power mutual assistance alliance as the only means of bringing Russia into the British-French front.

This was said to have been the result of discussions here between British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London.

[The United Press reported from London that the foreign office had confirmed officially that Britain had agreed to enter a three-power alliance and said Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to ask cabinet approval at the weekly meeting Wednesday.—Editor's note.]

League Session Overshadowed

The Maisky-Halifax meeting, which lasted almost an hour, overshadowed the 105th session of the Council of the League of Nations, the occasion that brought them to Geneva. The Council meetings start tomorrow.

Informed sources said that while no agreement had been reached in the conversations and the long negotiations still were "delicate," the reported change in Britain's attitude made possible an early agreement "in principle" at least.

In London, meanwhile, Britain was reported to have made substantial progress in removing Polish and Rumanian objections regarded as a barrier to bringing Soviet Russia into the British-French front.

French Urge Quick Action

Polish and Rumanian opposition to any plan which might result in use of Russian troops on their soil has been given by British spokesmen as the chief reason for Britain's hesitation in accepting Moscow's demands for a hard and fast military alliance.

The French had urged Lord Halifax to seek a speedy agreement with Moscow even at a high price. Russia has insisted that a three-way British-French-Russian alliance for automatic assistance in the event of need was the only thing that would win Moscow to what British Prime Minister Chamberlain has called a "peace front against aggression."

Two Plans Envisioned

Sources close to the Russian delegation said Moscow cared little about the form of such an alliance or about regional agreements attached to it, provided that the three-power pledges were clear-cut.

Lord Halifax was understood to have discarded the original British idea of three closely linked declarations. His main concern, informed sources said, was to determine just what form a triple alliance should take.

Two possible plans were envisioned here:

An entente covered by the League's dusty but still existent provision for combatting aggression by joint economic and military action by its members;

A three-power pact outside the League calling for automatic military action by all three powers only in event of a direct attack against any of them.

British Shift Necessary

Incorporated with a three-power pact, it was said, would be an agreement for immediate consultations and mutual aid if other states guaranteed by any of the three prospective allies were attacked and called for help

FBI Routs Race Bookies In Jersey City

Wires Hastily Plucked From Horse Rooms; 'All Bets Off' Is Order

By International News Service.

New York, May 21.—America's biggest racket dynasty since prohibition—the multi-billion-dollar race track bookie industry—appeared to be tottering tonight and about to collapse under relentless pressure of Department of Justice agents.

Private telephone wires to the big shot "bookies" operating headquarters in Hoboken and Jersey City, N. J., were being hastily snatched out, and trucks were being loaded with "office" records, both there and in midtown Manhattan "pay-off" offices of the syndicate gamblers.

Mayor Hague, Democratic boss of New Jersey, is reported to have given the word that commencing tomorrow "no bets by telephone are to be taken any place in the State."

G-Men Hunt Records

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were reported scooting about New York and Chicago, trying to locate private records of the gamblers who, following Attorney General Murphy's activities of last week, saw "the handwriting on the wall" and began scuttling to safety.

Telephone company officials from whom the bookmakers lease their private wires have not been notified of the discontinuance of their service except in the case of Frank Erickson, former Coney Island singing waiter, who became one of the Nation's biggest race track bookies, handling hundreds of thousands of dollars daily.

Erickson, with all his records, fled from his New Jersey operat-

Customs Houses Attacked on Charge Of Disrespect for Free City Women

By the Associated Press.

Poland and Danzig last night exchanged angry protests following the killing of a Danzig citizen by a Pole, the first fatality in the current tension, and attacks on Polish customs stations by what Warsaw authorities said were uniformed German Nazi detachments.

The series of incidents, sequence of which was disputed, brought to a threatening climax weeks of tension over Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demands that the Free City of Danzig be returned to the Reich.

According to Danzigers, the German, a 43-year-old butcher, was slain in cold blood on a lonely road late Saturday night.

Tension Reported Rising

According to Poles, the man was shot in self-defense by the chauffeur of a Polish official who had rushed to the village of Kalthof in an attempt to quell a mob "led by uniformed Nazis" which demolished the Polish customs station there.

Danzigers asserted no damage had been done to the customs station, declaring a crowd gathered there to protest the Polish "attitude toward Danzig women" had been broken up several hours before the killing, and had no connection with it.

[Reports from other sources, including DNB, official German news agency, told of spreading tension throughout Danzig and of rumored raids on several other Polish customs stations at various points. Extent and seriousness of these incidents could not be ascertained.—Editor's note.]

Danzig Demands Apology

Free City of Danzig, May 21 (AP). A Pole shot and killed a German citizen of Danzig early today. The Danzig Senate immediately demanded damages and a public apology from the Polish government for the incident which, it said, "is likely to influence gravely Danzig-Polish relations."

As a sequel this afternon, an angry mob surrounded the building in Pieckel where Polish inspectors live. The inspectors called Danzig for help. They reported the mob was yelling that "the killing must be paid for in blood."

Pieckel lies on the Vistula River in the tip of the triangle where Free City, Polish and East Prussian territory meet.

After two hours the mob broke up, however, and, according to official reports from both Polish and Danzig sides, no damage was done.

Versions Differ

The slaying of the Danziger, Gustav Greubner, occurred in the village of Kalthof, on the East Prussian frontier, between midnight and 1 a. m. today (6-7 p. m., E. S. T., Saturday), and the man charged with firing the two death shots was the driver of an automobile carrying three Polish officials.

The German version of the affair differed radically from the Polish, and Arthur Grieser, president of the Danzig senate, sent a formal note of protest to Marion Chodacki, the Polish commissioner here.

It requested:

That damages be paid to Greubner's family.

That Poland promptly and formally express her regrets.

That the man who fired the shots be handed over to the Free City police as proof that the three Polish officials who were with the chauffeur were not connected with the act.

Greiser said Greubner, who lived in Kalthof, had spent Saturday in Marienburg, and was returning with two other persons early this morning in a Free City taxi which was forced to halt shortly after crossing

Radio-Guided Planes May Fly Dogs to U. S. Antarctic Claims

By the Associated Press.

Such exploration innovations as directional radio and drugged dogs are expected to make a forthcoming United States Government expedition to the Antarctic easy for man and beast.

Confident of Congress' approval, Government scientists already have worked out the plans for the expedition which will lay formal claim on behalf of the United States to a vast segment of the Antarctic continent.

Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, director of territorial affairs, has drafted a request for funds and authorization to plant the United States flag south of 60 degrees latitude. A White House indorsement is expected this week.

Indications are that several Government vessels, including at least one Coast Guard cutter, will be used, with the Navy and other departments providing much of the equipment.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Lincoln Ellsworth, both veteran Antarctic explorers, are consultants.

A leader of the expedition has not been named, but informed persons said that Gruening's choice likely would be Capt. Richard Black, Interior Department field representative and a member of the

CONGRESSMEN AT PLAY

If you have seen Congress in action, and thought its members rather surprisingly blithe when dealing with a billion dollar bill, you should see them away from the Hill, off duty and on a frolic.

Mrs. R. G. Allen . . . one of 400

I have just spent 3½ days on a jaunt with 112 Congressmen, and a merrier crew I never saw. In a few days I'll be almost as good as new; I'll never, of course, be quite the same.

* * * *

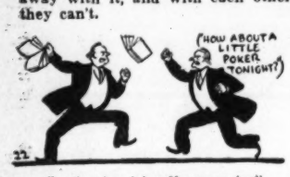
Very few men who suffer from melancholia ever get elected to Congress. Its members are not the type who go off in corners alone and brood. They have all the extrovert traits of boys in fraternity houses, soldiers in barracks, lumberjacks in camp, businessmen in country club locker rooms.

Their flavor is as American as a State fair.

* * * *

Only 70 out of the 435 in the House are big city fellers, but they are all men of the world, or get that way rapidly in Washington. Elections don't come easy; they had to wade through life up to their chins first.

They do not take themselves too seriously, except when they can get away with it, and with each other they can't.



"—they're friendly enemies"

If you have a son who wants to go to Congress (or if you harbor that secret ambition yourself) here are a few observations I've made.

Congressmen maintain an astonishingly high level of courtesy, politeness, thoughtfulness and deference toward each other. They fight only in the committee room's secrecy.

* * * *

In debate they may sneer at each other a little, but in undertones they're probably dating the opposition up for a lobster dinner or a poker game—especially opponents from other States.

Democrats and Republicans from the same State don't mingle so much.

* * * *

Most Congressmen are blessed with unusually competent wives . . . Some members could never have made the grade wit'out 'em; it was wife who put such highfalutin notions in their heads, or nursed them lest they die a-borning.

* * * *

These wives married 'em because they had more dash and zip than other suitors . . . Heaven knows they didn't marry future Congressmen for their beauty; handsomeness is usually the knell of a political career. The 400 wives on the Hill are a formidable lot.

* * * *

Congressmen are remarkably gallant to the ladies; not necessarily to their own wives exclusively; but even to their own wives they tend to be solicitous . . . Most members would go Sir Walter Raleigh two better; they'd put not only their cloaks on the mud puddle, but also their coats and vests and if necessary their pants.

"—they'd outpuddle Sir Walter"

This wouldn't be such a great loss, though, because while most members are fairly well dressed and a few pay from $65 to $150 for a suit of clothes, the majority of them are content with the best $35 suit that money can buy.

* * * *

The gents who make a precarious living inventing jokes about how dumb, pompous, inept and venal Congressmen are can't possibly spend much time with Congressmen.

Because the members themselves tell better jokes on themselves and each other than you encounter in general circulation.

Being a Congressman is not (as I used to think as a boy) itself inherently funny. It's being an undismayed and optimistic extrovert in this world of ours that's funny.

* * * *

Congressmen are astonishingly youthful in behavior; they average over 50 and act under 30 . . . They are not dismayed by their awesome responsibilities, treating the addition of a new battleship with the same sort of common sense they'd devote to a new furnace at home . . . Their greatest cross is balancing their own private patriotism-and-idealism against what will get 'em re-elected—which is the way democracy works.

* * * *

A Congressman feels that any course of action which might annoy his constituents and cause his defeat would be against the best interests of democracy.

Maybe that's the main reason why the Congressman is your bulwark of freedom.

Pamphlet Charges Federation Rank and File Oppose Changes

By the United Press.

The American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations clashed sharply last night over proposed amendments to the Wagner labor relations act, amid growing indication Congress will sidetrack the volatile issue until next session.

Federation President William Green charged in a radio address that the Labor Board, the C. I. O. and the Communist Party have united to maintain the act in its present form and ultimately to destroy the A. F. L.

"The American public," he said, "will judge these warriors in a common cause by their motives and by the company they keep."

Too Many Want Hearing

The C. I. O. renewed its accusation that the A. F. L. and the National Manufacturers Association had collaborated in drafting the amendments sponsored by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Chairman Elbert Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, of the Senate Education and Labor Committee, has intimated that, because of the great number of witnesses desiring to be heard, action on the amendments is unlikely before sine die adjournment.

The C. I. O. last night embellished its newest attack with the claim that the A. F. of L. rank and file is predominantly against the amendments. It charged further that the A. F. of L. convention was not given a chance to pass on the changes, and it challenged Green to prove that there was no collusion with manufacturing and antilabor interests.

Cites Gallup Poll

In addition, Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel and secretary of the legislative committee, made public a pamphlet, which is being sent to all C. I. O. and A. F. of L. affiliates and members of Congress, purportedly containing documentary proof of the collusion charge.

Green retaliated with a demand for "fair play."

"The American public was sounded out on the subject of the Labor Board by the American Institute of Public Opinion," he said. "In a poll of persons from all walks of life this institution found that 92 per cent felt that the Labor Board is biased the C. I. O.

"All we ask is fair play. That is all the labor act ever was intended to accomplish. That is what the Labor Board has disgracefully failed to live up to in administering the act—the principle of fair play."

Board Called Hostile

He said the record of the Labor Board shows that the Wagner act has been "tragically maladministered." He noted that the A. F. L. itself sponsored the original act and that it was based on the principle of equity.

"But it hasn't worked out that way," Green continued, "and the responsibility lies squarely with the Labor Board. The A. F. L. has reached the point where our 5,000,000 members feel that they are entering a hostile camp when they appear before the board. It is not just our imagination. We know we are viewed with enmity by the board and its staff. We know that from certain members of the board itself down through the roster of its employes there runs a common bond of sympathy for the C. I. O.

"This holds true especially among those whose political and economic beliefs lean to the left. The extremists on the pay roll of the Labor Board and on the pay roll of the C. I. O. have undoubtedly formed a 'united front.' "

Ten Union's Cited

Speaking of opposition to the proposed amendments, he said:

"First in the line-up we find the Labor Board itself, a group of bureaucrats bitterly opposed to surrendering any part of its power. Second in line stands the C. I. O., frantically trying at any cost to keep intact the favored treatment it now enjoys from the Labor Board. And finally, we find lurking in the rear, but beating the drum even louder, the Communist Party."

The C. I. O. pamphlet said that ten big A. F. of L. unions and scores of State, city and other federation organizations are listed as having taken a stand against the Walsh amendments.

"The pamphlet," Pressman declared, "shows conclusively that the membership of the A. F. of L. does not want the Wagner act amended and that it is in sharp opposition to the stand for the amendments taken by Green and his associates in collusion with the NAM and other reactionary corporation interests."

The pamphlet related that the issue is not between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. "It is, rather, an issue between labor and anti-union employing interests * * * It is possible to be either for or against collective bargaining and the Wagner act which protects it. It is not possible to be for the Wagner act and for amendments to destroy it at one and the same time."

Wallace Asks Businessmen To Co-operate for Recovery

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 21.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said tonight that "if capital is to come out of hiding and go into action after its ten-year rest, the initiative and the constructive thought and co-operative effort of the businessmen themselves are needed."

In a speech prepared for the eighty-seventh annual convention of District Grand Lodge No. 1 of B'nai B'rith, oldest Jewish fraternal organization in the United States, Wallace declared:

"There is always room for a difference of opinion on details, but it seems to me the national recovery program sponsored by President Roosevelt deserves all the cooperation that the whole country can give.

"Moderates Must Get Together"

"We can never get full recovery unless everyone—including the leaders of industry, labor, agriculture, and Government—are willing to put their shoulders to the wheel. . . . This is a time when moderates must get together."

Urging the unleashing of unused capital, Wallace said:

"The wise investor does not wait for a high tide of business before he goes ahead, for he knows that by that time the best opportunities are gone.

"The wise investor puts his capital to work when business is just starting on its upward curve. By his boldness, he helps make jobs for idle men, and he helps create business for all."

Demand Pent Up

Wallace several times declared there was need for Government aid and the initiative of businessmen to put the Nation's vast accumulation of idle capital to work "to release the great pent-up demand for all sorts of goods."

"The farmers," he said, "at last can see daylight ahead, as their program wins recognition from the Federal courts and the general public."

Every since the World War, he said, the farmers of this country have been fighting for equality of opportunity.

An Uphill Fight

"Theirs has been an uphill fight," he said, "waged in the face of dwindling markets abroad, unfair tariff laws, swift technological change, presidential vetoes, adverse court decisions and almost constant attack from vested interests."

Toching on Jewish misfortunes abroad, Wallace said no race had suffered continuously from injustice, insecurity and violence, and he suggested that members of B'nai B'rith should "broaden the traditional Hebrew concept of a 'chosen people' and think instead of this hemisphere as a 'chosen land'—the last place of refuge for the oppressed of the Old World."

Limit Arms to Free Trade, Hull Urges

that what happens abroad is of no concern to us," and replied caustically to those who he said urge economic isolation for this country.

"The commercial, as well as political policies of other countries . . . determine whether trade can be carried on with reasonable assurance of continuity," he asserted, with apparent reference to such trade substitutes as the German barter system. "They affect the decisions governing the active investment and use of our resources. They determine whether there shall be a paralysis of effort for fear all will be lost in case of a war. They determine whether our commerce shall be primarily in materials and weapons for human destruction or in the things which people need for peaceful consumption."

Economic isolation, he contended, would mean ruination for many farmers, loss of jobs by many industrial workers, stagnation in shipping and port activities and consequent "severe measures of governmental regimentation."

With pride in the reciprocal trade agreements program, the secretary said that "in the two-year period 1937-38 our average exports to the countries with which we have trade agreements were 61 per cent greater in value than in the pre-agreement period, while exports to all other countries increased by an average of about 38 per cent."

Again critical of such substitute programs as are followed by Germany and other totalitarian powers, he said:

"Such agreements are in marked contrast to discriminatory trade arrangements depending upon the will of centralized authority, involving the strictest control of exchange operations and of practically every phase of normal business relationships."

After tracing the agreements reached with 21 nations, Hull asserted that "under anything like normal conditions" a "satisfactory upward response in our foreign commerce" might be anticipated. This, he said, rose from $2,900,000,000 in 1932 to $6,400,000,000 in 1937, but declined last year to $5,100,000,000.

At the same time, the Pan American Union issued a report showing that United States exports to the Republic of El Salvador had increased in 1938 to provide 46.7 per cent of all of that country's imports. In 1937 the United States had supplied 40.4 per cent. Germany's share in El Salvador's trade dropped from 31.1 per cent in 1937 to 21.1 per cent in 1938.

Trust Inquiry To Hear Little Businessmen

Witnesses Summoned To Testify About Need of Capital

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Monopoly Committee, told by representatives of "big business" that there is not outlet for the country's stagnant capital in that direction, expects to ask "little business" about its capital needs this week.

As a preliminary, the committee will hear today a description of the way money circulates through the economic system.

May Suggest Laws

Committee members expect their testimony to provide the basis for possible legislation to cope with a changing national economy.

The possible nature of the change was suggested by President Roosevelt last week in a letter to Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, asking that the committee ascertain "why a large part of our vast reservoir of money and savings have remained idle in stagnant pools."

"Is it," he asked, "because our economy is leaving an era of rapid expansion and entering an era of steadier growth, calling for relatively less investment in capital goods?"

Loan Plans Studied

"Is it because of lag, leak and friction in the operation of investment markets which pervert the normal flow of savings into non-productive enterprise?"

Questions and comments of committee members have intimated the possibility of legislation providing for Government guarantees of loans for expanding existing business and starting new industries.

Some members have suggested that a plan similar to that now applied to home building under the Federal Housing Administration may be the answer.

Funds Available

Board Chairmen Edward Stettinius of United States Steel, Owen D. Young of General Electric, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., of General Motors and Frederick R. Rentschler of United Aircraft, all testified that they had no need to draw on the capital markets.

Funds for plant improvement and expansion, they told the committee, have been available from earnings.

Learner Certificates Needed Under Pay Law

Leaders in industry may be employed at wages lower than the 25-cents-an-hour minimum fixed under the wage-hours act only if special learner certificates are issued, Wage-Hours Administrator Elmer F. Andrews announced last night in reporting revised regulations. Such certificates must be issued at the time of employment, and approved by the Wage-Hours Administration, Andrews said. They cannot be made retroactive. Length of the "learning" period will be fixed by the administration.

U.S. Wins Back To 2d Place in Shipbuilding

Maritime Day Finds Only Britain Ahead in New Construction

By the Associated Press.

National Maritime Day today will find the United States back to second rank in shipbuilding and bidding for her old high position among the world's maritime nations.

By Presidential proclamation, today has been set aside to commemorate the first crossing of the Atlantic by a steamship, the Savannah, 120 years ago. But in maritime circles it will be a day of celebration too because of the greatest activity in shipyards since World War days.

Under impetus of the Martime Commission's program of replacing obsolescent tonnage and building still more ships, the United States has leaped within a few short months from fourth to second position in shipbuilding.

500 Vessels Planned

Lloyd's Register of Shipping shows that from December, to late March there was a 40 per cent increase in tonnage under construction in American yards, output on March 31 being 420,931 tons.

Only Great Britain and Ireland, classed as one unit, outranked this country, turning out 596,903 tons at the end of March.

The long range program of the commission is designed — in the words of Admiral Emory S. Land, its chairman—"to establish a fleet commensurate with the position of the United States as a major power."

The commission proposes to build, over a 10-year period, 500 merchant ships, some of them designed for easy conversion into auxiliaries for wartime service. The first of the ships, a tanker, went down the ways early this year.

In 1938, the commission exceeded slightly the annual quota for new construction it set under its 10-year program, awarding contracts for 51 vessels. This year it has awarded 14.

Ten vessels, five tankers and five cargo vessels, already have been launched. Either actually on the ways or about ready for keel-laying are 56 other vessels. Included is the liner America, on the ways at Newport News, Va.

The commission is celebrating the marine birthday with ceremonies at the Navy Yard today. The Merchant Marine training ship American Seaman, a steamer, will be formally commissioned. In the yard to take part in the celebration is another training ship of far different lines—the full-rigged Joseph Conrad, used to train modern-day sailors in the handling of wind ships.

Hearings to Open On Wire Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Public hearings will open today on the proposal by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, for a Senate investigation of the telegraph industry.

Wheeler asserted that a possible merger or consolidation of major telegraph companies threatened "a monopoly detrimental to the public, the industry and labor."

A sub-committee of the Interstate Commerce Committee, of which Wheeler is chairman, has summoned more than a dozen witnesses, representing governental agencies and labor, to discuss the proposed investigation. Wheeler will be the first witness, followed by Robert Cooper, of the Justice Department, and representatives of the Federal Communications Commission, War, Navy, Labor and Commerce departments.

Spending Issue To Be Pressed In Congress

Vandenberg Debates Economy on Radio With Senator Minton

The spending issue was thrust into the legislative situation last night, with Republicans intending to highlight it throughout the week, as Congress leaders looked to possible mid-July adjournment and laid their plans accordingly.

Business recovery, Government expenditures and the public debt and taxation all served to color the picture on Capitol Hill, while there were these Sunday developments:

Senator Vandenburg (Republican), of Michigan, declared over the radio that the "Santa Claus spenders are pushing us too close to bankruptcy for comfort" and quoted a statement by President Roosevelt in 1933 that "most liberal governments are wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy."

Minton Replies

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, replied that "whenever the calamity howlers tell you the Nation is broke, you just remind them that in 1932 Uncle Sam's bonds were selling for 82 and now they sell above 100 and draw the lowest rate of interest ever paid by this Government."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in New York, said that "if capital is to come out of hiding and go into action after its 10-year rest, the initiative and the constructive thought and co-operative effort of the businessmen themselves are needed."

Railroad legislation, outgrowth of the desperate financial plight of many carriers, was placed on the Senate calendar for this week.

The Republican National Committee completed plans for a series of speeches featuring its "National Debt Week" in an effort to force Government economies.

The Vandenberg-Minton debate tonight was viewed as a prelude to a controversy which is expected to rage in and out of Congress this week. Conflicts over spending and related question of removing tax "deterrents" to business recovery are nearing a showdown in Congress.

The group headed by Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has served notice that it intends to fight if necessary to revise the tax laws along lines which it believes will aid recovery and stimulate private employment. New Dealers, including Senator Pepper, of Florida, have announced that they would act to start a new spending-lending program unless President Roosevelt came forward soon with a program.

Both of these questions are expected to figure prominently in the regular weekly White House conference this morning between the Congressional leaders and President Roosevelt, who is insisting that any tax revision must be worked out so that it will result in no loss of revenue.

Vandenberg's Points

Vandenberg declared in his air talk:

"We have created too many instrumentalities of government, many of which are sound in principle and which the people would not permit to be abandoned. But we can stop the creation of new instrumentalities where we are. We can quit making new ones until we have caught up with the bills for those now existing. We can stop creating new Federal subsidies until we have found a way to pay for those created heretofore.

"We can postpone every new governmental enterprise not immediately essential and provably indispensable. We can clean house, wherever possible, in respect to existing undertakings. We can rip politics out of pay rolls. We can once more put a horizontal reduction on all Federal salaries in the higher brackets. We can quit boondoggling. We can substantially tighten up in all directions if the official tempo and the official pattern are to see how much we can save rather than how much we can spend."

Minton Recalls 1933

Minton replied that borrowing and spending were not creations of the New Deal, that they were "necessary to have prosperity." He said that when private business could not "keep the wheels of industry turning" in 1933, the Government had to "step in and incur the debts to keep up the spending."

As a result, Minton contended, the Nation's income was increased by about 70 per cent, 8,000,000 men went back to work and the leading corporations had an over-all profit on their investments of 8.3 per cent during 1936 to 1938 inclusive.

The national debt of approximately $40,000,000,000, the Indiana Senator said, was about 57 per cent of our national income. He added that we could best judge its size by comparing it to the national debt of Great Britain, which, he said, was 140 per cent of its national income.

By eliminating $16,000,000,000 of debt carry-over from the World War, the $4,000,000,000 debt increase under the Hoover Administration, $2,000,000,000 of soldier bonus payments, three billions unspent in the Treasury and four billions of "recoverable assets," and $2,000,000,000 in the Treasury stabilization fund, Minton said the New Deal actually had spent nine billions for recovery and relief.

Roosevelt Talks Tonight To Retailers

President Expected To Attack Business Hostility to New Deal

More than 1,000 of the Nation's leading retail merchants will hear President Roosevelt tonight in what is expected to be a hard-hitting attack on business opposition to the New Deal and an aggressive restatement of the Administration's economic policies.

The President's speech will be at a banquet of the American Retail Federation's "Retailers' National Forum" at 9:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. The talk will be broadcast nationally.

Dr. David R. Craig, federation president, will open the forum today with a luncheon at which Secretary of Commerce Hopkins will speak on "The Retailer and the National Life." Other Government officials and members of Congress will join in the two-day sessions.

The President's speech was awaited with a high degree of interest, not only by the retailers but by Federal officials who expect it to contain a vigorous rebuttal to business attacks on the Administration, notably those of the United States Chamber of Commerce which held its annual meeting here early this month.

Occupied with foreign affairs, the President has delivered no significant speech on domestic matters since his first message to Congress in January. The Retailers' Forum is regarded as probably the best business sounding board for the President's words, since its policies have been largely sympathetic to New Deal objectives. The chairman of the American Retail Federation's board of trustees, Louis E. Kirstein, closely associated with the liberal Boston merchant, Lincoln E. Filene, has set the federation's progressive tone.

The President is expected to discuss aids to little businesses and to outline policies toward big enterprises. He will have an opportunity to clarify the Administration's position on the problems of debt, taxes, relief, spending and loans to small businesses.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is expected to discuss the farm surplus problem when he addresses the forum tomorrow.

Speakers in this afternoon's session will include Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican floor leader; Dr. Beardsley Ruml, treasurer of R. H. Macy & Co., and member of the National Resources Board; Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann Department Stores; Robert E. Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission; Dr. John M. Cassels, director, Institute for Consumer Education, Stephens College, Columbia, Mo.; Benjamin F. Sisson, vice president, Sisson Brothers Welden Co.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee, will discuss "Influences Retarding the Flow of Goods" at tomorrow's meeting.

Other addresses tomorrow morning will be delivered by Homer W. Ladd, vice president and general manager, Ladd Furniture Co., Fort Worth, Tex.; B. Earl Pucket., president of Allied Stores Corporation.; John W. Rudin president and treasurer, Dowds-Rudin Co., Mount Vernon, Ohio; Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board, Sears Roebuck & Co.; William H. Hager, president of Hager & Bro. Lancaster, Pa.

Hunter C. Phelan, president of D. Pender Grocery Co., Norfolk, Va., and Louis E. Kirstein, Boston retail merchant and chairman of the American Retail Federation's board of trustees, are scheduled to speak at the concluding meeting.

3 Killed and 4 Hurt as 3 Trains Pile Up in Wreck in Ohio

By the Associated Press.

Piqua, Ohio, May 21.—Three freight trains piled up in a wreck near here today, killing three trainmen and injuring four others.

One freight train had stopped to take on coal. The second crashed into the rear of the first, derailing the second locomotive and scattering wreckage of freight cars over both Pennsylvania Railroad tracks.

A fast fruit train en route from Chicago to New York had orders to pass both slow trains on the other track at high speed.

Cars Derailed Half a Mile

It piled into the wreckage, scattering debris for several hundred feet. The first locomotive of the double-header leaped up on top of the locomotive of the second train and then rolled back down.

Cars were derailed for a half mile as the wreckage piled up at the center of the smash.

The dead:

Harry J. Johnson, 45, fireman; Fred L. Tricker, 45, engineer; Leonard Schaefer, 44, flagman, all of Logansport, Ind.

The injured:

J. C. Murdock, 46, Columbus, fireman, condition critical; Gordon Pinney, 50, Columbus, engineer, condition fair; Charles Bryan, Logansport, Ind., crewman, condition fair; Frank L. Messersmith, 58, Logansport, Ind., engineer, condition fair.

Fleeing Flagman Crushed

The wreck occurred at Bradford, 15 miles west of Piqua and 20 miles east of the Ohio-Indiana line, where the Chicago and Indianapolis divisions of the Pennsylvania join.

Messersmith, engineer of the second locomotive of the third train, was pinned in his cab and rescuers worked two hours to release him with metal-cutting torches. His leg was crushed and he suffered burns.

The other injured men suffered burns, scalds and fractures.

Trainmen said Schaefer was trying to get away from the crashing wreckage when a loose box car bore down upon him as he tried to climb a fence at the right of way. It rolled over and crushed him beneath it.

Baby Girl Jailed With Parents Held In Slaying

Stanford, Ky., May 21 (AP).—County Judge John Menifee said today a month-old girl would remain in a jail cell with her parents, both charged with murder, pending grand jury investigation of a constable's slaying.

The mother, Mrs. Reba Simpson, 22, is accused of firing a pistol at Constable Larkin Stapleton, 69, at nearby Crab Orchard, Ky., yesterday while holding the baby with with one arm.

Colored Paralysis Center Authorized

New York, May 21.—The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis announced today that a grant of $161,350 has been made for establishment of an infantile paralysis center for colored persons at Tuskegee, Ala. The money will be used to build, equip and maintain for one year an infantile paralysis center of 36 beds.

Basil O'Conor, president of the foundation, said the Tuskegee center will train colored doctors and surgeons for orthopedic work and will train Negroes as orthopedic nurses and physiotherapists.

Arts Prize Winner Named in Girl's Accidental Death

Cleveland, May 21 (AP).—Lake County Prosecutor L. W. Donaldson said it was reported to him that Daniel Boza, 28, winner of the Prix de Rome in 1933, accidentally shot and killed his companion, Miss Jane Union, 21, early today at a lake shore cottage party.

Donaldson said he was told Boza, a special deputy sheriff, was toying with a .45 caliber pistol.

The gun was accidentally discharged, a bullet striking a table and riccocheting into Miss Union's temple. Coroner J. G. Powell withheld a verdict pending further questioning.

350 Native Americans Are 'Naturalized'

Young Wisconsin Voters Swear to Defend Constitution

By the Associated Press.

Manitowoc, Wis., May 21.—Manitowoc County formally welcomed 350 native Americans into citizenship today in its unique movement intended to meet the challenge of foreign isms by building a stronger democracy.

Climaxing months of instruction in Americanism, and a day of impressive ceremony, these 21-year-old war babies of 1918 rose en masse and swore support of the Constitution.

Cheers swelled from the watching thousands, gathered from all over Wisconsin, as each youth stepped forward to receive a certificate attesting his citizenship.

Speaking for the young men and women, Jerome A. Mahlberg, of Kiel said: "To us, this day is an unprecedented challenge . . . to put our best thought and our best effort into the serving of our country, our State and our Nation."

The originator of Citizenship Day, Dr. R. J. Colbert, head of the University of Wisconsin social science department, envisioned its growth throughout the nation, with annual ceremonies in each State.

Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, denounced those who use democracy for exploitation and personal gain, and urged the youths to fight off challenges to the democratic way.

Taussig Urges Navy to Split Scouting Force for East, West

Atlantic Coast Practically Unguarded, Says Rear Admiral, if All Cruisers Remain in Pacific

By the Associated Press.

An official strategist's proposal that the fleet's scouting force be reorganized and divided, equally between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans stirred the interest of Navy high command officers yesterday.

Rear Admiral J. K. Taussig, fifth naval district commander and former assistant chief of operations, advanced the proposal with the contention that the Nation's sea forces at present were "illogically" distributed.

"The Atlantic seaboard and our overseas possessions in the Atlantic are practically unguarded," he asserted in published proceedings of the United States Naval Institute.

Since the fleet was concentrated in the Pacific in 1932, the Navy has rejected resolutely all suggestions that its strength be divided. Current moves to bolster Panama Canal defenses and to create a Caribbean air Gibraltar at Puerto Ricco apparently involve no shifting of naval forces.

Urges Division of Forces

But while agreeing that the fleet's main body should be based in the Pacific, Admiral Taussig argued that a division of the mobile scouting force was desirable.

He proposed that the Atlantic and Pacific scouting forces each have half the available 18 heavy cruisers, half of all the submarines, a squadron of destroyers, one carrier with planes, and long range patrol planes.

In the Pacific he said, the scouting force should be based at Hawaii, well in advance of the battle force of battleships, light cruisers and other vessels, instead of the San Diego-San Pedro area as at present.

Should "political considerations" prevent, he suggested it rotate between Hawaii, Southern California and Puget Sound.

"Ideally," Admiral Taussig said, the Atlantic force should operate in the Caribbean, but "outside forces" might require that it cruise northward at intervals.

Offers Temporary Security

"With two such scouting forces, whichever way the battle force may be called on to move, there will be in the advance a force of sufficient strength to afford at least temporary security and to obtain essential information," Admiral Taussig said.

The scouting force he proposed would put in the Atlantic nine 10,000-ton heavy cruisers, armed with 8-inch guns.

Under present orders, the three aging battleships of the training squadron—the backbone of the Atlantic force created last year—will be supported after this month by only three light cruisers.

Admiral Taussig suggested also that each of the two equal scouting forces have its own squadron of supply ships, and that the Atlanic commander direct local naval forces at Panama and the Pacific scouting commander local forces in Hawaii.

Philip Rhinelander Dies in New York Rooming House

New York, May 21 (AP).—Philip Kip Rhinelander, 43, clubman and brother of the late Leonard Kip Rhinelander, who figured in sensational litigation over his marriage to a West Indian's daughter, was found dead today in an uptown furnished room.

Police attributed the death to natural causes.

Rhinelander's wife, the former Helen G. Alexander, was reported vacationing in Bermuda. They had two daughters.

French United For Free Peace, Herriot Avers

Have Achieved Unity With Friends, Among Selves, Says Leader

By Edouard Herriot,

President, Chamber of Deputies, Former Prime Minister, Leader of Radical Party
By Special Cable and Special Wire to The Post

Paris, May 21.—In this month of May I am happy to describe as I see it the position of France in respect to international problems. This is easy to define. France has never been more united than at present—united in herself and united with her friends. One thing I wish to say is that all the French people are passionately interested in the voyage of their Britannic Majesties in Canada. All Frenchmen, won by the personality of the British sovereigns since their visit to Paris, associate themselves with the moving tributes which thousands of children have offered to their King and their Queen.

Link Between Nations

And in this marvelous journey of Their Majesties I see further proof most deeply symbolical of the intimacy which now exists between the sons of Great Britain and the sons of France.

Another favorable factor is that this friendship has been proclaimed in a country bordering upon the United States to which we largely owe that declaration of the rights of man of which France is at present about to celebrate the anniversary.

The main result of the events which have taken place in Europe during the last year (the annexation of Austria, of Bohemia and of Moravia; has been to provoke in France, not only in the metropolis but in all regions governed by the French flag, an increasing concentration of public opinion which is now at its maximum. It is fair to admit that the same was not the case in September, 1938, at the moment of the Munich conference.

While some feared the continued development of a policy of violence founded on the conjugated theories of race and of vital space other Frenchmen confidently believed, as they had been told, that the settlement of the Sudeten problem was the last claim to be advanced by Germany. Events have proved that this was not the case. The totalitarian states have pursued and increased their demands.

Since then the concentration of public opinion has become still more marked. France has made it a point of honor not to reply to certain insults and unfair aspersions. But it should not be forgotten that she has not ignored them. At the present moment France is unanimously behind her government.

Diplomatic Drive Pushed.

Another diplomatic campaign of the greatest importance is being pursued in constant agreement with Great Britain. The conclusion of the Anglo-Turkish agreement appeared to guarantee the peace in a particularly efficient manner. This has been a source of especial gratification to me personally. I have seen on the spot the organization of Turkey by a man of genius after the war. This outstanding statesman founded a democratic republic on the ruins of despotism and transformed all institutions in order to bring them up to the level of an honest and laborious population. I had hoped that this republic would see fit to come to an agreement with the liberal countries. This hope has been fulfilled. And I am glad to congratulate the great assembly of Ankara, which has unanimously voted this agreement.

The same is true in the case of the Soviet Russia. Oumansky, the new Soviet Ambassador to the United States, has just made a speech at the New York Fair which impressed me considerably: "Our country's external policy," he said, "reflects the will of our people to insure peace and international security."

I hope that for this purpose an agreement will be concluded between Great Britain and Soviet Russia as soon as possible. This solution seems to me to be the sole way to achieve this aim. I speak on behalf of my country.

Therefore, should Germany be encircled? No, certainly not. When, in agreement with Foch, I evacuated the Ruhr; when, after discussion with the Germans, we signed the act which was designed to settle the question of reparations; when the Dawes plans was converted into the Young plan; when France prematurely liberated the left bank of the Rhine; when she pacifically settled the Saar problem; when she requested Germany to adhere to the League of Nations—all this was in the hope of including in an international community a people whose merits were appreciated and with whom France wished to collaborate in the interests of humanity.

What the French definitely oppose is chronic violence, the consistent rupture of treaties, the denunciation of a promise, the constant triumph of force over liberty. This idea lies at the root of the solid and level-headed union realized among the whole French people—union among themselves, union with their friends.

King, Queen on Way To See Quintuplets

King and His Majesty's government—against tummy disorders.

It is their first train ride, and the precautions that are being taken are as elaborate as those for the King and the Queen themselves.

[Yesterday at Callander, for the first time in their lives, the quintuplets saw a motorcar at close range and had the thrill of sitting in one, according to a United Press dispatch from North Bay, Ont. The occasion was to secure publicity photos, but it also served the purpose of preventing any "scenes" this afternoon.

[Yvonne was really excited. She sat at the wheel and almost frightened the wits out of herself and sisters by blowing the horn. After that, she confined her experiments to rolling the windows up and down, and opening and closing the doors.

[Her sisters were fascinated with the gigantic "toy" that the doctor had brought into their play yard. When it actually moved, it disturbed them momentarily and they appeared to be a bit nervous. Discovering that it was no more dangerous than their lawn swing and twice the fun, they shrieked with joy. They were reluctant to part with the car, and it was only when the nurses assured them that it would return to take them to the train that they could be coaxed back into the nursery.

"Birds" in the Engine

[When the engine was running Yvonne and her sisters tried to discover "the birds in there." It was Emilie who found the Fisher body trade mark.

["Oh look at the carriage," she exclaimed, "that's the King and Queen's carriage."

[The large and perfectly polished hub caps were a source of delight to the children. The distorted reflection of their images frightened them at first, but when they discovered that the strange little girls looking back at them were really themselves they shrieked with delight.

[Under the supervision of Inspector Frank Creasy, four provincial police constables, in addition to the North Bay detachment's motorcycle squad, were at the hospital this evening to escort the quintuplets. A cordon of police kept the crowds from swooping down on the children.—Editor's Note.]

The Ontario Works Department, brushing up on the care and feeding of children, has installed a refrigerator in the office of Premier Hepburn, where the King and Queen will meet the amazing little girls.

Five meals will be served the children in Toronto. Orange juice, soft-boiled eggs, bacon, brown toast and milk will constitute their breakfast. For lunch they will have broiled steak, peas and carrots, baked potatoes, Bavarian cream, hard biscuits and milk. At 3:30 comes a lighter meal. For dinner they will have a cereal, brown buttered bread, apple sauce, lettuce and tomatoes, cottage cheese and milk.

Little Girls Guarded

A police inspector and three of Ontario's provincial police will be on guard aboard the train, playing the same role as the red-coated Canadian mounties who are guarding the King and Queen.

The little girls are to wear floor-length white organdie gowns when they are presented to Their Majesties.

Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, small-town general practitioner, who brought the little girls into the world, is their lord chamberlain on the journey to Toronto.

Their ladies in waiting, or panty changers, are Nurses Louise Corriveau and Molly O'Shaughnessy. Mama and Papa Dionne also are along, as well as Miss Grace Demers, their housekeeper and Gaetena Vezina, their teacher.

[Neither Oliva or Mrs. Dionne has shown or expressed any particular nervousness or concern about their presentation to the King and Queen tomorrow, the United Press reported. Yesterday, Oliva told reporters he was "Comme-ci, comme-ca," (like this, like that). A few weeks ago he told the United Press that he was not nervous or worried about what to do or say.

["Why should I be?" he asked. "The King and Queen have been brought up properly. They won't laugh at me."

[For the presentation tomorrow, Oliva will wear a blue business suit with blue tie and white shirt.

[All the other children at home, with the exception of baby Victor, will travel to Toronto on tonight's train. Victor will remain at home with the housegirl.

[Rose, Therese and Pauline will be dressed in white with black patent leather shoes and white stockings. Ernest, Daniel and Oliva, jr., will wear blue suits, white shirts and blue ties.

[Just returned from a private boys' school, Ernest is quite excited because he will be wearing "les memes choses que papa."

[Last night, Mrs. Dionne visited a hairdressing parlor in North Bay and had her hair especially dressed for the occasion.]

Text of King George's Speech

Ottawa, May 21 (Canadian Press).—Following is the text of the King's speech at unveiling of the National War Memorial here today:

It is my privilege, as your King, to unveil today, in your capital city, the noble memorial to Canada's spirit and sacrifice in the great war.

It is almost a quarter of a century since the beginning of the great war. Four years earlier my father had succeeded to the throne. For many, the memories of the war will always have an immediate association with this reign. It has been given to me today to recall Canada's part in the great conflict. Fortunately, my task is already largely performed, for in the beautiful work of art which I have just unveiled vivid and enduring expression has been given to the spirit of Canada.

The time and the place of today's ceremony are not without significance. I am not surprised that it has taken many years to bring this memorial into being, and to give it this appropriate setting. On the battlefields of Europe, and throughout the Dominion, there are many memorials to Canada's honored dead. Today, in her own capital, Canada dedicates her national memorial.

The memorial speaks to the world of Canada's heart. Its symbolism has been beautifully adapted to this great end. It has been well named "The Response." One sees at a glance the answer made by Canada when the world's peace was broken, and freedom threatened in the fateful years of the Great War. It depicts the zeal with which this country entered the conflict.

But the symbolism of the memorial is even more profound. Something deeper than chivalry is portrayed. It is the spontaneous response of the nation's conscience. The very soul of the nation is here revealed.

Surmounting the arch, through which the armed forces of the nation are pressing forward, are the figures of peace and freedom. To win peace and to secure freedom, Canada's sons and daughters enrolled for service during the great war. For the cause of peace and freedom 60,000 Canadians gave their lives, and a still larger number suffered impairment of body or mind. This sacrifice the national memorial holds in rememberance for our own and succeeding generations.

This memorial, however, does more than commemorate a great event in the past. It has a message for all generations and for all countries—the message which called for Canada's response. Not by chance both the crowning figures of peace and freedom appear side by side. Peace and freedom cannot long be separated. It is well that we have, in one of the world capitals, a visible reminder of so great a truth. Without freedom there can be no enduring peace, and without peace no enduring freedom.

Veterans Slap King on the Back

For 30 minutes they were just George and Elizabeth, a likeable young couple among friends. Their hands were shaken, the King's back was slapped, they heard and spoke the language of Jack Canuck.

Cheer after cheer burst from the solid ranks of veterans, rolled back through the crowd, and, for the first time on this tour, that old drinking song reserved for the finest of elbow benders welled up from 60,000 throats.

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," they sang, and the King flushed with pleasure and the Queen had trouble with her eyes.

Young Trooper Faints

The nervousness which afflicted Their Majesties' official guardians might have been spared. Through all the back-slapping, hand-shaking, jostling and cheering, there was naught but friendliness. Police and dignitaries futilely bucked the crowd, but Their Majesties walked right through. The crowd gave way readily before them, closed up tightly behind as they passed.

Canada had taken its sovereigns to its heart.

One young soldier among troops drawn up for the dedication, in red coat and great black bearskin shako, stood in the beating sun two hours, rigidly at attention. Suddenly he wheeled with precision, marched to the nearest exit (which chanced to be the American press gallery) and there, out of sight of His Majesty, fainted.

Recalls War Service

In formal morning coat with striped trousers, top-hatted and wearing a black cravat with a thin white stripe rather than the conventional grey ascot, His Majesty rose to dedicate the monument. Across the left breast he wore a row of miniature medals, some of them won afloat in that world conflict commemorated today. He spoke more smoothly and with less effort than at any time before on the tour.

"It is almost a quarter of a century since the beginning of the Great War," he said. "Four years earlier my father had succeeded to the throne. For many, the memories of the war will always have an immediate association with this reign.

"It has been given me today to recall Canada's part in the great conflict. Fortunately my task is already largely performed, for in the beautiful work of art which I have just unveiled vivid and enduring expression has been given to the spirit of Canada . . .

To See Quints Today

"Not by chance both the crowning figures of peace and freedom appear side by side. Peace and freedom cannot long be separated . . . Without freedom there can be no enduring peace, and without peace no enduring freedom."

He walked then straight from the dais into the crowd, the Queen by his side, the royal entourage frantic with useless apprehension.

Her Majesty wore a costume of oyster white and a white hat, turned up at the side.

After their informal court for the veterans, the King and Queen left for Kingston, Ontario. They stood on the rear platform as the royal train pulled out and at Kingston were to stop for a 35-minute motor tour of the city.

Train Waits on Injured Girl

At Brighton, Ont., the royal train was halted 20 minutes while Miss Margaret Lapp, reporter for the Brighton Ensign and correspondent for the Toronto Telegram, received first aid from Surgeon Capt. H. White, R. N., medical officer to His Majesty.

Miss Lapp injured a leg when she tripped and fell on the track while awaiting the train here.

After Kingston their next stop was Toronto, where tomorrow they will meet the Dionne quintuplets, who left home tonight for their first journey of any kind from the nursery in forest-bordered Callander, where they have lived all their five years.

St. John, New Brunswick, May 21 (Canadian Press). — The Rev. A. Raymond Smith, rector of St. Anne's Church at Welchpool, Campobello, has accepted an invitation to assist June 11 in services at St. James' Church, Hyde Park, N. Y., which will be attended by King George VI, Queen Elizabeth, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt has a summer cottage at Campobello. The invitation to the Rev. Mr. Smith was extended by the President's pastor, the Rev. Frank Wilson.

'No Surrender!' Zionists Shout In Jerusalem

Nonpayment of Taxes, Boycott of British Imports Planned

By the Associated Press

Jerusalem, May 21.—Five thousand Jews, amid shouts of "We are not surrendering," today burned a copy of the British White Paper, which announced a plan to set up an Arab-dominated state in Palestine.

The well-ordered demonstration in a high school courtyard and disciplined street parades during the day were in marked contrast to the violence which greeted the White Paper's announcement last Wednesday. One person was killed and 114 injured in clashes with police Thursday.

British troops and police took extreme precautions against recurrence of the disorders although there have been indications the Jews intended to pursue a policy of passive resistance rather than violence against the new British policy.

Police Keep Hands Off

Today, a crowd of more than 3,000 Jewish youths remained at the scene of Thursday's rioting, singing the Jewish national anthem, "Hattikvah," and shouting "Down with the British government." The police and military refrained from interfering and the crowd later thinned out.

The Jewish National Council at a meeting today recommended this six-point non-cooperation program to Palestine Jewry:

Training of young Jews for any emergency.

Fostering of home products to replace imports and avoid paying customs duties to Britain.

Nonpayment of taxes.

Restriction of the use of public services which bear profit.

Taking control of bodies such as the all-Jewish Tel Aviv municipality and religious communities away from the government and putting them in Jewish hands.

Annulment of Jewish participation in the Jewish municipal system, "which is based on domination of the Arab minority over the Jewish majority."

Reconsideration Asked

London, May 21 (AP).—An appeal was made to the government today to reconsider its Palestine policy by the Jewish board of deputies—representative body of Jews of the British Empire.

Sir Robert Waley Cohen, vice president of the board, said the government's "gravely mistaken proposals" condemned both Arabs and Jews to a policy which must "shake all confidence and so hamper and reverse the magnificent economic progress of the last 20 years."

A parliamentary showdown on the plan was expected to come Tuesday when it was scheduled for a vote after two days of debate.

If Parliament approves the plan, as the government expects, it will be submitted to the mandates committee of the League of Nations.

Vandenberg Backs Zionist Home In Palestine

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday urged the United States Government to extend "every co-operation" in prevailing upon the British government to carry out the pledges in the Balfour declaration.

"I believe today more than ever in the Zionist home in Palestine," he said in a prepared statement. "It is clearer than ever today that the inhumanity of man makes it more logical and more essential than ever.

"The Balfour assurances should not be defaulted. The Jews of the world took them in good faith and have invested heart and fortune in them. They have a right to every international co-operation in behalf of this Jewish homeland."

Germany and Italy to Sign Military Alliance Pact Today

By The International News Service.

Berlin, May 21.—Immediate and automatic mutual military assistance in the event Italy or Germany becomes involved in war, regardless of circumstances, was reliably reported tonight to be the chief provision of the Fascist-Nazi war pact to be signed tomorrow.

The pact, a high authority said, consists of seven clauses, the most important of which specifies that neither nation can remain neutral but must immediately come to the aid of the other if one is embroiled in war, no matter what the cause.

The accord will be effective at once for an initial period of ten years, and supersedes all previous agreements. Mutual staff consultations are provided to cover specific problems of offense or defense, but the "principle" of common aid is "irrevocably acknowledged."

It is also reported the pact provides for a central military command in case of conflict.

Neither partner to the accord can conclude a separate peace, according to terms of the agreement revealed by an authoritative source.

Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano, accompanied by Gen. Alberto Pariani, undersecretary of war and chief of staff, arrived today to sign the pact and tonight conferred with Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Reich military chieftains.

The signature tomorrow will merely formalize what was already generally understood—that Italy and Germany have had a military, naval and aerial understanding since the Rome-Berlin axis was founded.

The agreement was announced May 7 in Milan, Italy, after conferences of the two foreign ministers.

Bonnet Pledges France Won't Bow to Force

Vow to Veterans Is Strongest Stand He Has Taken Publicly

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 21.—Foreign Minister Bonnet assured 50,000 World War veterans today that "France will not let the spirit of domination reign over the world."

The foreign minister addressed the Congress of the National Veterans Union, before leaving for Geneva.

Bonnet told the veterans he was "forced to silence" concerning details of negotiations to bring Soviet Russia into the Anglo-French front.

He has been under fire as the foreign minister who tolerated Germany's dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia, France's former ally.

He acknowledged failure of post-war efforts for collective security and disarmament.

Now, however, he declared, "some nations and some peoples who did not see clearly the menaces hanging over the life of Europe have approached little by little the points of view which have always been those of the French government."

He reviewed Britain's adoption of conscription and the guarantees of support given to Poland and other nations.

"To complete this system of guarantees," he went on, "France, in accord with England, has engaged in negotiations with Turkey and the Soviet Union which we want to conduct rapidly to a good end in the interests of peace.

"Thus France, which a year ago had to bear alone the weight of assistance she had promised, can count today on new aid of capital importance."

Japanese Order Foreign Children To Carry Passes

Chefoo, China, May 21 (AP).—Three hundred American and other foreign children of the Inland Mission School here felt the force oday of the Japanese military administration, which decreed that all third power nationals over six years of age must obtain military passes to appear on Chefoo streets.

Japanese soldiers invaded the grounds of the Inland Mission School yesterday, charging some one there attempted to photograph a Japanese naval bombing plane loading bombs from the mission-owned beach adjacent to the school.

Balkan Entente Hangs in Balance

Bucharest, May 21 (AP).—The foreign ministers of Rumania and Yugoslavia completed a conference aboard a Danube River boat today and returned to their capitals with the future of the Balkan Entente a closely guarded secret.

They were known to have discussed a Yugoslav plan for ending the Balkan Entente, but the project of substituting a federation in which Bulgaria could take part had to be discussed with the other two members of the entente, Turkey and Greece.

Franco Police Seize 19 Smugglers of Foes

San Sebastian, Spain, May 21 (AP).—Nationalist police today seized 19 persons charged with being members of an organization smuggling enemies of Gen. Franco into France.

Leaders Who 'Beat Drums of Hatred' Assailed By Bullitt as He Praises Unity of French

By the Associated Press

Rouen, France, May 21.—William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to Paris, today denounced world leaders who "beat drums of hatred and conquest" and "are deaf to appeals to reason."

"In the end truth triumphs," Bullitt declared in an address at ceremonies in the old marketplace of Rouen to commemorate the death at the stake there of Jeanne d'Arc.

The Ambassador expressed a belief that "the unity and serenity of France" was evidence that peace still could be preserved.

Referring to the "voices" which led the Maid of Orleans to lead her country's armies, Bullitt said:

"Unfortunately for the world there are still many in authority who do not know how to listen to voices of good will and good counsel. They are deaf to appeals to reason, to friendship, and to human solidarity, and they beat drums of hatred and conquest.

"Their peoples . . . would know how to listen if they were not prevented by the deafening roar of the drums of war from hearing the voices of peace. In consequence, the deaf lead the deafened.

"But if one thing is certain in human history, it is that in the end truth triumphs. The voice finally is heard saying: Do unto others as you would they should do unto you. . . .

"In every quarter of the earth love of man for his home, his country and his freedom is on the side of France because France is on its side.

"And what of the people of France? You will permit me to say . . . I have never seen a people face dangers more admirably than the French today. . . .

"And if peace is to be saved, as I believe it is to be, the French may say to themselves with truth that without their courage and their unity it would not have been possible. . . ."

10,000 Rumanians Protest

Bucharest, Rumania, May 21 (AP).—Ten thousand Jews, sobbing and wailing, gathered in the Jewish quarter here today to protest "injustices" of the new British plan for Palestine.

Detroit Zionists Rally

Detroit, May 21 (AP).—A resolution calling Britain's new Palestine policy "a flagrant violation of Jewish and human rights" was adopted today by 3,000 persons at a rally sponsored by Zionist organizations.

A Promising Start

When the District budget hearings were held last November a survey of child welfare problems was under way. Consequently, the child welfare portion of the budget estimates was left incomplete. Additional estimates based on the findings of the survey were made last week, and the President has recommended their approval by Congress.

An additional appropriation of $56,940 is requested to provide two new services and to expand the existing home-finding and child-placement service. While this sum is very much less than the amount the Board of Public Welfare considers necessary to bring Washington abreast of other cities in constructive handling of child welfare problems, it is at least a start in the right direction.

The protective and preventive aspects of the child welfare program will be furthered through the creation of a new service designed to improve family conditions which, if uncorrected, might cause children to become wards of the board. Another so-called "institutional service" will extend the present parole system and co-ordinate it with related child welfare activities.

In short, the additional appropriation is to be spent in ways that tend to relieve the burden upon welfare agencies by preventing delinquency and by reducing the chances of a recurrence of delinquency. That is not only economical in the long run but, much more important, it also assures improved conditions under which children are less likely to become public charges.

Two Favored Roads

As reported out of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, the Chandler bill providing for voluntary debt adjustments between railroads and their creditors has been greatly restricted in scope. Critics of the bill had expressed fear that it would be used to stave off general reorganization proceedings instead of being confined to temporarily embarrassed roads hoping to escape receivership. To meet this objection the amended bill applies only to carriers whose plans have already been approved by the ICC. That means only two roads —the Baltimore & Ohio and the Lehigh Valley could seek relief under its provisions.

Both the favored railroads have incurred great trouble and expense in working out adjustment plans acceptable to a large proportion of their creditors. That in itself constitutes a reason for permitting them to proceed. Moreover, there is reasonable expectation, especially in case of the B. & O., that future improvement in business will enable the roads to meet fixed charges and resume dividends. A pick-up in the heavy industries, for example, would probably spell financial salvation for the B. & O.

In any case, no harm would be done and good might result from trying out the proposed adjustment plans. As the ICC pointed out when it authorized the B. & O. to proceed with its adjustment plan, "the alternative is clearly reorganization under the bankruptcy statute." "In such a proceeding," the statement continued, "security holders undoubtedly would be called on for much greater immediate sacrifices than this plan contemplates."

There is, however, no denying that the Chandler bill in its amended form is a highly discriminatory proposal, granting two roads certain privileges denied to others. If the bill passes, Congress will probably be importuned to make similar concessions in case of other hard-pressed carriers, and it will be difficult to refuse such requests.

When testifying before the Senate committee in favor of the restrictive measure, A. A. Berle asserted that there was ample precedent for passage of legislation in aid of individual carriers. Nevertheless, it is difficult to justify such preferred treatment. In the present instance, it is generally admitted that the moving appeal of Daniel Willard, veteran president of the B. & O., to save his road from bankruptcy is largely responsible for the committee's action. Mr. Willard is to be congratulated on his personal victory. But one cannot escape the conclusion that particularistic legislation approved in response to special pleading establishes a bad precedent.

Foreign Trade Week

In New York City the celebration of foreign trade week was fittingly inaugurated by dedication of the world trade center at the fair. Like the San Francisco Fair and other great expositions of previous years, the New York World's Fair is, as its name implies, an international project. The beauty and variety of the displays are in large part due to the participation of many countries to which we are closely bound by commercial ties. Among the outstanding American exhibits, moreover, those of the Nation's great export industries take first rank.

If the world consisted of self-contained nations, dependent upon neither exports nor imports, the great international fairs of modern times would never have been held. For they would have served no purpose except to satisfy aimless curiosity. As it is, they are useful object lessons, reminding the public at every turn of the reality and the importance of foreign trade. In such an environment addresses and discussions of foreign trade problems should take on vital meaning that is too often concealed in a mass of statistical detail.

The outstanding event of the week in New York will be an address by Secretary Hopkins on the occasion of the world-trade dinner at the Casino of Nations. Most of the speakers who will address the public in all parts of the country during the week will doubtless emphasize the economic benefits of foreign trade. But there is another aspect of foreign trade which President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull stressed in their radio messages last evening, both of which were read by Mr. Hull.

The President noted that the celebrations of foreign trade week and of national maritime day "have to do with works of peace: the beneficial exchange of goods; traffic of merchant ships on many seas; the friendly development of commerce." He added that "Our hope and aims are that peaceful interchange shall again become the normal state of affairs."

After reviewing the progress made in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements, Secretary Hull concluded with an eloquent appeal for liberal trade policies. He made it clear that he was speaking "both in behalf of a growing commerce, and in behalf of tranquil and orderly political principles in international relationship." "We need for our own prosperity and security a world in which nations can achieve a full utilization of their economic capabilities in producing for exchange with each other," he said. "We need a world in which mobilized mankind ceases to be keyed by exhortation to the pitch of reckless action, in which arbitrary force is abandoned as the basis of international conduct, in which the practice of a genuine friendship among nations is again restored."

Today this ideal situation seems particularly remote. For the United States as well as other nations is pursuing domestic policies that tend to disrupt the normal flow of international commerce. Nevertheless, Secretary Hull does well to remind the American people that the maximum benefits of international trade can be obtained for each and all participating nations only in an atmosphere of peace and understanding, permitting easy movement of goods from country to country.

Flexible Birthdays

When you come to think of it, King George's system of having his birthdays according to the convenience of his subjects rather than at the dictate of an arbitrary calendar has much to commend it. Under the usual method of reckoning, the King's birthday would occur December 14. But at that time of year the English climate is at its worst; besides the Christmas holidays are less than a fortnight away. So it was the part of logic as well as of accommodation for the King to change his birthday to June 9 when the weather is likely to be fine and a holiday would be most appreciated.

But, of course, there is no point in sticking to June 9, either, if some other date happens to be more convenient. Because the people of Ottawa last Saturday wanted to celebrate the royal birthday, the King graciously moved it forward 20 days and everybody was quite happy. The best part of it is that if we want to have a celebration of our own here in Washington next month the King will be pretty sure to oblige us with still another birthday.

This system of flexible and voluntary birthdays has, as far as we can see, everything in its favor and nothing against it. And it has far more advantages for the ordinary man or woman than for a king. A king, for instance, could not cease having birthdays without depriving his subjects of pleasure. But there would be nothing to prevent the rest of us from stopping them whenever the weight of the birthdays we have had already becomes uncomfortable.

But those who would rather retire on pensions than go on working could pile up birthdays as rapidly as they pleased. Young men would find it an easy and convenient system of keeping themselves well stocked with neckties, handkerchiefs and other small articles of haberdashery; and young wives could be sure of an abundance of trinkets and flowers.

As for young children, life could be one beautiful round of toys, cakes, candles and ice cream. This would to be sure make them grow up pretty rapidly. They would be men and women before we knew it; but that often seems the case under the present birthday system anyhow.

Unworkable

Senator Borah has dealt what may well prove to be a fatal blow to the proposed constitutional amendment giving the people the sole right to decide by referendum whether the United States should participate in a "foreign" war. After questioning proponents of the measure from an entirely sympathetic point of view, the Senator from Idaho has concluded that it would be unworkable.

"If we could find a practical way by which those who would have to die could say whether or not they should go abroad to fight," says Mr. Borah, "that would be what I would want, but I can't see how there is a practical means of doing it." He points out that no clear-cut line can be drawn between wars in which the United States might be attacked and "foreign wars" in which this country would presumably send its forces abroad. Should a dispute with a foreign government come to the point of open conflict, the United States might risk national disaster by waiting for an attack at the convenience of the enemy.

Aside from this danger, the amendment would result in a critical division of authority at a time when unity of action would be most in demand. Congress would have power to declare war under one set of circumstances and under slightly different conditions that power would be relinquished to the people. Should an attack upon the commerce of Brazil or some other Latin-American country lead to war, presumably Congress could vote this country into the conflict without question. But should an attack be made upon our own commerce in foreign waters, it appears that the issue would be left to the people.

Herein lies a weakness of the proposal that has not been sufficiently emphasized. It would give us a curious combination of representative government and pure democracy, with no certainty in any emergency which type of political machinery would have to be relied upon to put the Nation into a position to defend itself successfully.

There is much to be said for direct government by the people under conditions where it is practicable. In the case of a war referendum, however, there is grave danger that the people would not have sufficient information in an emergency to make an intelligent decision on complicated issues involving foreign policy. The worst possible place to begin applying the technique of pure democracy would be in a field where grave decisions have to be made promptly on the basis of facts that may not be generally known.

The proposed war-vote amendment must be viewed, therefore, as a confusing modification of our system of government as well as a handicap upon the efficient management of our foreign relations. From this angle how can even the most ardent isolationist refute Senator Borah's conclusion that it is impractical?

Art And The State

At the recent dedication of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, President Roosevelt pointed out some important differences between art in a democratic society and art in a regimented state. Some days later, speakng to members of the American Federation of Arts on the educational and cultural value of the Community Art Centers, Thomas C. Parker, deputy director of the Federal arts projects, reiterated the President's statements and added that Government sponsorship of art in this country has meant more, not less freedom for the artist.

So far, it is true, American artists have not often been censored for political reasons. They have certainly not been told they must produce propaganda labeled as art. Nor has the Government given exhibits of what it chooses to call "American" art, and others of typical "un-American" art, a parallel to which happened recently in Germany.

But when the state plays "angel" to the arts, the dangers of bureaucratic restrictions and political censorship, even though they may be imposed indirectly by the people, are always latent.

As an example of the best tradition of the democratic spirit, the President cited the Federal arts projects of the WPA. American artists, he said, can "express themselves with complete freedom from the strictures of dead artistic tradition or political ideology." Examples of occasions when this has not been absolutely true are already numerous. The theater project especially has brought charges of "un-American" down on its head. Charges of propaganda in the writers' project have also been made effectively.

As is well known, the most revolutionary advances in the arts have rarely received popular support at their inception. How long will it be before Congressmen and their constituents will start objecting equally effectively to certain works of the arts projects, not only on political grounds, but also because they don't like them?

Moral Rearmament

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial "Moral Rearmament" that appeared in The Post May 16 was just recently called to my attention. I have read it and I thank you for informing Washington more completely of this remarkable movement.

If individuals and nations want solutions to their problems they will find them in moral rearmament. This movement is backing its convictions with living evidence. It does not speak of theory; it speaks from practical experience.

Moral rearmament is proving that human nature can be changed; that as men are changed, nations will change; that as nations change, the world will become different.

The change must begin in us. Let's start by morally rearming our own lives and our own Nation. That is the only logical place to begin.

The 'Certain Party'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think I know both answers to the question raised by Mr. Wolesensky regarding "Idle Capital" in your column on May 19.

One reason the "certain party" doesn't ask the investors (as I agree would be the logical thing to do) is because they are already answering it. The other reason, in my opinion, is because the answer proves his mistake. He, contrary to declaration once made, instead of being the first to admit mistakes made is just about the last.

Florida Ship Canal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The setback administered by the Senate to one of Squandermania's pet projects, the Florida ship canal (The Post editorial "A Significant Defeat" takes the scheme apart), is the taxpayer's first break during this session's morass of errors.

Every known device has been used to jam across this favored foible of the New Deal. Its passage would have meant that the latest installment of breathing spell and "Governmental co-operation" with business to defeat unemployment, had gone the way of like gestures made in the past.

After the debacle it has made of the economy program, to which it committed itself unconditionally when the session opened, Congress could do no less.

If Britain Is Beaten?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: England's guarantee to come to the aid of the smaller nations and of Poland, if attacked, has had the salutary effect, of at least temporarily halting the aggressor nations, of their independence. Why couldn't America make the same definite guarantee to come to the aid of the peace-desiring nations if attacked? Surely all America must know that should victory for the aggressors be the outcome of an armed conflict, America will be the next victim.

Hitler aims not only at European, but world domination. The first demand the victorious aggressors would enforce would be the surrender of the British fleet. We would rather sink the fleet than hand it over—but the demand would be made with the threat, that should we sink as much as one ship, every town in England will be subjected to an aerial bombardment of "the most utter ruthlessness."

The aggressors would then sail with the ex-British fleet, manned by German seamen, together with the present German and Italian fleets to the east coast of America, while Japan, simultaneously sails to the Pacific coast. Naval experts will agree, that the American fleet, divided in two, won't have a hope of engaging an enemy fleet of such vast proportions.

We read that Hitler may, as a reply to President Roosevelt's (that great and outstanding personality in the world today) demand the return of Germany's former colonies, "to their rightful owners." Will the aggressors be prepared also, if we do so, to restore Czecho-Slovakia and Abyssinia to their rightful owners?

The surrender of a fleet by one nation to another is not a fantasy. It happened in the last war.

WILL TO PEACE.

On Alien Registration

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos the proposed "Alien Bill," which would compel "fingerprinting and annual registration of resident aliens," may it not be assumed that such an act contradicts the American principle of liberty? Is it not true that in most cases, so-called aliens, are such in name only, perhaps because legislators have been too much engrossed with already complex national problems such as crime, unemployment, etc., to bring the naturalization laws up to date?

Are the strangers within thy gates, as the Bible has it, to be penalized for lack of foresight on the part of legislators and their failure to do simple justice to law-abiding resident immigrants? How would reputable American born residents in Turkey, Greece, France or Germany feel, if they were to become subject to similar laws?

If there is a suspicion that people from other countries now in America are more dangerous, more prone to crime and violence, and therefore must be subjected to such rigid surveillance, then why blame Germans for supposing themselves a little better or superior to other races? The plain fact is, that in the name of political freedom and lack of law enforcement, criminals flourish, and the law-abiding residents suffer. This chaotic condition started many years ago, when possession of a certain sum of money became the qualification of entry into the United States. Thus, if potential crooks, robbers, etc., had the required sum of $50 in their pockets and perhaps the additional advantage of speaking the English language, they could easily come in. But if the prospective immigrant should happen to be a veritable saint, who could neither talk English, nor had the $50 in his pocket, he would not have been eligible to enter. Is America, at this time, really the free country that it is proclaimed in all parts of the world to be? P. CALPAKIAN.
Washington, May 20.

John L. Lewis' Proposals

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of Tuesday, May 16, with regard to Mr. Lewis' letter on WPA may be confusing to those who do not follow the WPA situation closely. Therefore, I would like to have the opportunity to point out some matters which your editorial writer seems to have misunderstood in the editorial entitled "Muddled Suggestions."

The request for 3,000,000 jobs, as the letter pointed out, is a minimum request, predicated upon current economic and political conditions. It was not an estimate of the number of jobs necessary, as the letter made clear.

You have considerably confused the matter by suggesting that the abolition of the "means test" for eligibility means that all eligible workers will get jobs. That just is not so. The provision that those who are out of work and ready and willing to work should be eligible simply means that eligible workers are released from the necessity of going through the horrible experience of being divested of every bit of property, of insurance, and so on, in order to get on the work program.

Perhaps your readers do not know that it is necessary, in order to get on the WPA at present, to be certified as in need of relief by local relief agencies throughout the country. Such certification is based upon the worker's ability to reach a state of absolute destitution. One of the purposes of the WPA is to maintain the morale of the unemployed, not to destroy their self-respect.

Another advantage of certifying all unemployed workers as eligible is that there will be in existence what has never been in existence before, some kind of accurate information as to the number of unemployed. It is perfectly stupid for experts to talk about providing an adequate program for the unemployed, unless we know how many are unemployed, which we do not.

Your editorial objected to Mr. Lewis' suggestion that wages be sufficient to maintain an American standard of living. Your answer presumably would be that wages should be insufficient to maintain an American standard of living, and the C. I. O. does not accept such an answer.

You further assume that Mr. Lewis' request that (1) jobs be fitted to the needs and skills of unemployed workers and that (2) projects be socially useful and productive are incompatible. The fallacy is obvious. There is no reason why socially useful and productive projects cannot be established which are also fitted to the needs and skills of unemployed workers.

If some of the present WPA projects have failed to fulfill these qualifications, it is due mainly to obstructors of the program and not to those who seek its welfare. The WPA has been hedged about with all kinds of restrictions upon sponsorship contributions and upon types of projects. The wonder of it is that the WPA has been able to do so well under such great handicaps.

Your editorial suggests, quite gratuitously, that the interest of the C. I. O. in the continuation of the WPA is superficial. Anyone with a knowledge of the job that the C. I. O. has done in seeking to make the WPA successful could not make such an unsupportable allegation. Mr. Lewis' letter simply carried out the policy which was unanimously adopted at the constitutional convention of the C. I. O. last November.

I want to point out the importance of Mr. Lewis' suggestion that the WPA should not be reduced below 3,000,000 jobs unless there are no more eligible workers. The past history of the WPA has been a long one of reductions on the program absolutely unjustified many times by reductions in the need. The damage that has been done by this kind of procedure both to the program and to the workers is incalculable. There should be some kind of guarantee that the WPA will not be slashed below 3,000,000 jobs unless there are less than 3,000,000 people who need jobs.

The Post Impressionist

A Timely Subject

I HAVE A FRIEND who can wake up at 6:30 in the morning almost to a second. But he is never on time for an appointment. He has no bedroom clock, nor does he carry a watch.

There are certain attitudes of mind that think time is non-existent or that timing devices are joy robbers or that time was made for slaves. He who is not a philosopher or mathematician will leave Dr. Einstein to his theories; most people will continue to live in a network of Time, "that illimitable, silent, never-resting thing called Time, rolling, rushing on, swift, silent like an all-embracing ocean tide."

Let us not argue whether the day should begin at sunrise as with some peoples; or at evening as with others, or at midnight, as is the accepted time in most of the European and American lands. Nor shall we discuss the differences between the chronologies of the Chaldeans, which place the flood at 432,000 years before Christ, and Archbishop Ussher, which says that event was only 2,348 years before his birth. We'll give credit to the Chaldeans for their wonderful astronomical work and their division of the day into 12 hours, the hour into 60 minutes and the minute into 60 seconds. And I am not going to venture any opinion upon that theory of the astronomers that the pull of the moon is slowing the earth's rotation on its axis and some time there will be a day of 1,123 hours. To go off at a tangent, just think how a lot of fashion designers would wail if women's skirts were lengthened in inches as the day is said to be lengthening in seconds—at the rate of one-thousandth of a second per century.

When there were no such things as railroads, no such organizations as labor unions; when a man was a rather free agent in many ways, the question of a split-second timing device was of little consequence. And yet reasonably accurate time was needed in some ways, especially for navigation at sea, a long time ago. The early watch, made entirely of iron, from four to six inches in diameter, weighing often from six to ten pounds, and varying by the hour in the 24, was developed to a point where in 1762 John Harrison produced a timepiece that varied only 1 minute and 54½ seconds on a voyage from Portsmouth, England, to Jamaica and return, winning for that from the British Parliament an award of $100,000. But what did that mean? It aided in the determination of longitude within 18 miles.

You recall Capt. Cuttle's timepiece as described by Dickens, a silver watch so big and so tight in his pocket that it came out like a bung. "Walt," said the Captain, handing it over and shaking him heartily by the hand, "a parting gift, my lad. Put it back half an hour every morning and about another quarter toward the afternoon, and it's a watch that'll do you credit." Such timekeeping may have served Capt. Cuttle's purposes, but it will not answer now. In these days we need faith in our watches like the man's who said, as he stood, watch in hand by the seashore just before sunrise; "It is one minute to sunrise. If the sun does not begin to lift himself out of that ocean in 60 seconds he'll be late, that's all."

Yes, we have watches that will tell you just when the sun is due to rise and when it ought to set, and give you a perpetual calendar of the days and months. The Horological Institute of America, which is holding its annual meeting today in Washington, has a fine collection of such timepieces. But at the moment the Institute is concerned with the watch in your pocket, and what you will do with it when it needs repairs. Science needs time divisions in the millionth part of a second, but no such accuracy is expected or required of watches. While the Institute is a scientific, educational, non-profiting organization, desiring to have in Washington a Time Building and Planetarium, and a great collection of timing devices, its main purpose at the moment is certifying all over the country men who can do for you a reasonably good job in the cleaning and repairing of your watch. From among such men can be developed super mechanics for the important work the Nation needs.

It is said that early in the nineteenth century a watchmaker named Arnold offered for a small wager to ascend Salisbury spire and while there take to pieces and clean a watch and bring it down in running condition in less than an hour. 'Tis said he won the wager. The real watch man has a horror of that kind of work. The number of watches that have been ruined by cheapjohn, so-called watchmakers is countless. In a report just to hand of a test on a repairman the watch was found to be dirtier on its return than when sent to him, because of the chemicals he used. I will not attempt to present the technical failures, but just state that two pieces of camel's hair that had been placed in the works purposely remained there just as they had been put in for the test. The really serious thing is that many watches are ruined by incompetents you trust to make them good.

I carry at times three watches—one that was my father's, one of the early, finest machine-made pieces; one that was my mother's, a fine Swiss watch, and a modern American watch, a presentation piece. I choose the man who touches their works. If my father's watch had not been in the hands of good workmen it could not keep good time after running 60 years. America needs the finest of mechanicians, and we must not starve them.

Will Rogers spun a story about a fellow spending all his money to buy a watch. He walked down the street from the jeweler's store until he saw on a building a clock which said the time was 2 o'clock. But his watch said 1 o'clock. And he was proud of the fact that though he had had it only a few minutes it had made an hour already!

And there will continue to be all kinds of time—day time and night time, "doing time," and "time out," "big time" and "time for another," "time to kill" and "time to spare"—and we might go on, but it is time to retire.

PAUL MOORE.

Income Tax Returns

THIS BUSINESS of pulling income tax returns out of the Treasury files and blabbing the private details in Congressional inquiries is not only crooked but a means of political intimidation. President Roosevelt prompts this observation by another of those executive orders authorizing this frisk by the Dies committee in the further course of its investigation of anti-American activities by Communist and Nazi-Fascist groups and individuals. This kind of Executive order makes a handy stick with which to kill a snake, but it can be used to whale Americans as well at the pleasure of a President and any committee with a hate on. There are special weapons for killing snakes.

The income tax returns are supposed to be absolutely confidential between the victim and the Treasury and subject to no scrutiny by anybody, including the courts, except where the Treasury has some ground for proceeding against the taxpayer on charges of tax-law violation.

Even Counterfeiter's Return Is Privileged

EVEN A CRIMINAL, operating a chain of brothels and transporting women across State lines in violation of the Mann act, even a counterfeiter who makes an income shoveling homemade sawbucks, is required to report his earnings and permitted to deduct his probable costs of operation, and the statements which he makes in the process of obeying one law are supposed to be privileged and not available to any other department which would like to use them as a confession that he violated another law. Any prosecution for those crimes is supposed to proceed independently, even though sworn admissions lie in a filing cabinet in the Internal Revenue.

Theoretically the Department of Justice can't even look at the returns for leads which would clew its young King Bradys onto dead-sure evidence, but if you believe that the D. of J. doesn't take peeks now and again, I just don't know what can be done for you.

Naturally, any American would like to know how much money the Nazi government has been piping into the anti-American bund to pay for sedition and the sabotage of the American form of government according to the Henlein method which wrecked Czecho-Slovakia.

The Henlein conspiracy was the very model for the bund operations here. Henlein was a legal citizen of Czecho-Slovakia just as Kuhn, the American boss-boche, in the strictly technical sense, is a citizen of the United States. He was on intimate terms with Hitler, just as Kuhn is, and he took advantage of every exasperating weakness of the democratic system to protect himself from interference with his campaign to create internal dissension, discredit the Czech government with the people and make its destruction easy for his Fuehrer.

The Communist method is almost identical, and it would be equally interesting to know how much money the Moscow government has passed into the Bolo conspiracy and in what guises.

Snaring Inspection Viewed Permissible

NOW, IF this authority were used only in such cases there would be no serious objection, because the country should use all its weapons to slay its enemies, especially those who operate within and claim for their operations the protection of American laws. But it is not used sparingly.

Last year it was used as a weapon of political punishment against individuals who had opposed or in the sinister phrase, lobbied against the reorganization bill, and although the order was supposed to expose the returns of those who lobbied for the bill as well, including Jimmy Roosevelt, the lobby committee was not inquisitive about his returns or those of any other Administration lobbyist.

Even Senator Minton himself, who ran the show, didn't insist on throwing his returns on the table for expert analysis and sinister interpretation, although one would expect the pure in heart to set the example.

Income tax returns are confessional documents. They search the private lives of the victims, and there is no more excuse for the public inspection of yours, except in a tax case up for trial in court, than for the inspection of the President's own or his mother's or Jimmy's.

Church to Hear Choir From Texas Here Today

With Marguerite Slaviansky as director, the Southwestern University Chorus, of Georgetown, Tex., will present a concert today at 8 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

The group is en route to Baltimore, where it will represent Texas and the Southwest at the biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs. Twenty concerts will be given on the tour.

Mme. Slaviansky was for many years the conductor of the Royal Russian Chorus. Her father composed "The Song of the Volga Boatman."

The 'Balanced Budget'

PRIDE OF authorship is a foible which will be pardoned by everyone who dabbles with the pen or typewriter. But I wish Hugh S. Johnson could forget the speech which Franklin D. Roosevelt made at Pittsburgh, Pa., in October, 1932.

The speech is a favorite among opponents of the New Deal because it is the one in which Mr. Roosevelt preached the virtues of a balanced budget. I suspect it is Hugh Johnson's favorite because it was his chief literary contribution to the campaign of 1932. It had a Johnsonian tang, which failed to conceal that it was a concentrate of economic bromides.

Like others who often quote that speech, Gen. Johnson customarily omits the passage in which Mr. Roosevelt said: "If starvation and dire need on the part of any of our citizens make necessary the appropriation of additional funds which would keep the budget out of balance, I shall not hesitate to tell the American people the full truth and ask them to authorize the expenditure of that additional amount."

Perhaps this passage was inserted by somebody who had a clearer idea than Hugh Johnson of the New Deal program as a whole. Only six days before he spoke at Pittsburgh, Mr. Roosevelt had said he would never economize at the expense of the needy unemployed. In accepting the Presidential nomination more than three months earlier he had proposed that 1,000,000 unemployed be put to work in the forests. Presumably Hugh Johnson and the other economy hounds realized that these 1,000,000 men were not to be expected to eat pine cones. Later in the campaign Mr. Roosevelt outlined more fully a relief and unemployment program.

IT WAS obvious in 1932 that Mr. Roosevelt could not keep his pledges with regard to relief and public works and at the same time make the 25 per cent cut in the total Federal budget pledged in the Democratic platform. He tried to reconcile those promises by cutting the regular Federal budget first—about 25 per cent—and then advocating expenditures for the relief of unemployment.

Recently Hugh Johnson alluded to the "economic medicine men" who sold Mr. Roosevelt "the squander policy." If my memory is correct, Hugh Johnson was one of the "economic medicine men" who sold Mr. Roosevelt on a spending program in the spring of 1933. An appropriation of $3,300,000,000 for public works—the biggest peacetime expenditure which had ever been voted until then—was an integral part of the National Industrial Recovery Act which Hugh Johnson helped to draft.

One of Hugh Johnson's complaints at the time, as I recall, was that he wasn't allowed to spend this money—and spend it rapidly. In that complaint a good many New Dealers sympathized. For Harold L. Ickes, who was intrusted with the spending program, moved so timidly that very little of the money left the Treasury until a year later—excepting the chunk which was allotted to Harry Hopkins for his CWA program during the winter of 1933-34.

It was a common saying in the Administration that the President should have put Hugh Johnson in charge of the public works program and Harold Ickes in charge of the NRA program. For Johnson, it was felt, would have pushed out the money at a pace which would have made even Hopkins look like a disciple of Benjamin Franklin, while Ickes would have gone at the business of approving NRA codes in a slow, skeptical manner which would have spared the New Deal the economic and adminstrative mess into which Johnson paraded the NRA.

EVEN IN 1932 there were men in the Roosevelt camp who thought our economic troubles were too deep-seated to be cured either by balancing the budget or by temporarily unbalancing it to take care of the unemployed or to "prime the pump." In several speeches—notably at Oglethorpe University and at the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco—Mr. Roosevelt indicated that he thought that the period of rapid expansion in the American economy had come to an end. Adolf Berle, Rex Tugwell and other men in the Roosevelt policy-making group believed that, and addressed their minds to its implications. Many of the problems which they saw and pointed out then are now being examined by the Temporary National Economic Committee—the "monopoly" investigation—in its current hearings on savings and investments.

Savings are moneys withdrawn from the economic stream. They must be put back into the stream, through investment, or the stream dwindles. Therefore, savings must not be greater than the opportunities for investment. A few years ago the economists of the Brookings Institution concluded that even during the twenties we had saved more of our national income than could be used in legitimate investment. The excess savings went into reckless foreign loans, the pyramiding of securities issued against existing plant, and the bidding up of the prices of stocks beyond all semblance of sanity.

The figures put before the TNEC by Lauchlin Currie, of the Federal Reserve Board, show that we are still saving as large a percentage of our national income as we did in the twenties. We must either reduce our savings—which are accounted for chiefly by large corporations and individuals with incomes of more than $10,000 a year—or find new uses for these savings. That is the crux of our economic problem.

'Y' 'Old Timers' To Hold Reunion

A total of about 3,000 years membership in the Y. M. C. A. will be represented by approximately 100 men who will attend the annual "old-timers" reunion and dinner in the Central Young Men's Christian Association, 1736 G street northwest, Wednesday evening. The reunion will begin with a reception at 6 p. m. and be followed by dinner at 6:30. Attorney Huston Thompson will speak.

Ickes to Speak At Howard Rites

Secretary of Interior Ickes will deliver the principal address at the dedication of the Founders Library at Howard University Thursday afternoon. The $1,106,000 building was erected with Public Works Administration funds.

Besides the usual reference, periodical and study rooms, the new library contains a lecture hall, 900 study seats and a capacity of 500,000 volumes, which may be expanded to take care of 200,000 more.

D. C. Library Group Elects Officers

Officers elected at the last meeting of the season of the D. C. Library Association are Elsie Rackstraw, of the Federal Reserve Board, president; John Russell Mason, of George Washington University, vice president; Clara Widger, Army Industrial College, secretary; Janice S. Brown, of the Plant Industries Board, assistant secretary; Edmund Freeman, of the Bureau of Railway Economics, treasurer.

Elected to the executive board were Mary G. Lacy, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics; Hazel McDonald, of the Securities and Exchange Commission; James Leslie, of the Library of Congress, and Ralph Thompson, of the Public Library.

Montgomery to Talk On D. C. Milk Supply

The Once Over

Explorer Of Tomorrow

(Digs Up World's Fair of Today.)

I've just unearthed a very curious building.

All the buildings we find around here are curious.

Yes, but I mean curious in a different way. Although empty, it is full of violent rumblings. We hear them distinctly.

You've evidently dug up the office building occupied by a Mayor LaGuardia of the period. I hear you found an interesting mummy yesterday.

Yes. It was that of a man with amazingly flat feet. His head faced the wrong way and his neck was twisted like a corkscrew. In one hand he held a map, some advertising folders and what appeared to be smelling salts. In the other he held a package marked "Pop Corn Crispettes" and something resembling a loaf of bread with what seems to be a petrified piece of red rubber hose in it.

I believe you have unearthed the typical World's Fair visitor. Our researches indicate there was a World's Fair here 2,000 years ago. The petrified rubber hose is not a hose at all but a frankfurter, one of the strangest of all the phenomena of the period.

Was the frankfurter a weapon of some kind used by those early people of the 1930 period?

Not at all. It was an article of food.

What a strange race they must have been!

By the way, has the research department been able to make much of that big steel tube in which was found so many articles and so much data of the ancient world?

It is particularly puzzled by something that resembles a waffle iron, only it is soft and has a conical top, slightly askew, covered with queer gadgets and considerable ribbon. Some of the men think it was a woman's hat of that period in civilization.

Oh, come now! It was a mad age, but the people couldn't have been that crazy.

In our excavations the other day we dug up what looked like three layers of charred leather. Between the layers we found what seemed to be a piece of hard rubber, some petrified vegetables and a very oily substance. It baffles me completely.

I think I know what it was.

What?

A three-decker sandwich with mayonnaise. I read about them some time ago in a history of the era.

You mean people ate them, as well as the frankfurter, as you called it?

Precisely.

They were a tougher race than generally believed.

Nothing is baffling our scientists more just now than the constant unearthing of shiny black stovepipe affairs. Eight more were dug up today. Every one has the initials "G. W." in it.

George Washington?

No, he belonged to an earlier period and was a comparatively inactive figure.

We run across stationery headed "Grover Whalen" everywhere we dig.

Maybe that's the fellow!

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Look Homeward, Angel!

I HAVE BEEN READING again the President's appeal for peace addressed on April 15 to Adolf Hitler. It contains a line of argument which, it seems to me, the Administration ought at this moment to address to itself in regard to its domestic policy.

The President began by saying, "You realize, I am sure, that throughout the world hundreds of millions of human beings are living today in constant fear of a new war or even a series of wars. The existence of this fear—and the possibility of such a conflict—is of definite concern to the people of the United States, for whom I speak."

He continued: "Because of the fact that after the acute tension in which the world has been living . . . there would seem to be at least a momentary relaxation . . . this may be an opportune moment for me to send you this message . . . If threats continue, it seems inevitable that much of the world must become involved in common ruin. All . . . victors . . . vanquished . . . neutrals . . . will suffer.

Leaders Have Power to Liberate

"I REFUSE TO BELIEVE that the world is of necessity . . . a prisoner of destiny. On the contrary, it is clear that the leaders of great nations have it in their power to liberate their people from the disaster that impends. It is equally clear that in their own minds and in their own hearts the people themselves desire that their fears be ended.

"It is still clear to me . . . that problems can be solved at the council table. It is therefore no answer to the plea for peaceful discussion for one side to plead that unless they receive assurances beforehand that the verdict will be theirs, they will not lay aside their arms. In conference rooms as in courts, it is necessary that both sides enter upon the discussion in good faith, assuming that substantial justice will accrue to both . . .

"I am convinced that the cause of . . . peace will be greatly advanced if the . . . world were to obtain a frank statement relating to the present and future policy of governments . . . Reciprocal assurances . . . will bring the world an immediate measure of relief . . .

"THE DISCUSSIONS which I have in mind relate to the most effective and immediate manner through which the peoples . . . can obtain progressive relief from the crushing burden . . . which is each day bringing them more closely to the brink of economic disaster . . . We recognize complex . . . problems, but we know that study and discussion of them must be held in an atmosphere of peace. Such an atmosphere cannot exist if negotiations are overshadowed by the threat of force . . .

"I think you will not misunderstand the spirit of frankness in which I send you this message. Heads of governments in this hour are literally responsible for the fate of humanity in the coming years . . . History will hold them accountable for the lives and the happiness of all . . .

"I hope that your answer will make it possible for humanity to lose fear and regain security for many years to come."

Message Wasted On the Fuehrer

WHAT THE PRESIDENT is urging in this message is the use in international relations of the essential democratic process—namely, deliberation, freed of prejudice, in an atmosphere from which the use of force or the threat of force has been removed.

It is, I think, sent to the wrong address in being sent to the head of the Nazi government. For Mr. Hitler does not give even lip service to the democratic process. He believes in force as the only arbiter of destiny.

But it is a message that ought to be addressed, and readdressed continually, to the governors of democratic states. For the practice of democracy is the renunciation of force in the settlement of problems.

Mr. John Gunther, who has recently returned from China, was giving me a little lecture the other day on the ideographs of the Chinese language, and I was fascinated to learn that in Chinese the word "democracy" is expressed by the two concepts, "together-peace."

Peace and togetherness are indeed the essence of democracy. As the President points out so clearly in his message to Hitler this peace is disturbed by the introduction into deliberations of threats—that is to say, of force. What form the threat may take is not important. In deliberations between sovereign states the threat is the use of firearms, bombs and gas.

BUT IN DOMESTIC deliberations force is no less potent because it takes the form of the threat of character assassination or economic ruin, or the organized class struggle.

Force is the final arbiter which stands behind the law. But if it is introduced into the process of making the law, then the law itself does not represent agreement—the law is not the result of the democratic deliberative process—but only represents the triumph of one side or another in a veiled war.

Each new regulation, therefore, is a little Peace of Versailles or Treaty of Brest-Litovsk. It does not represent either the wishes of all or the compromise reached in the interest of all, but the triumph of a faction; and it immediately starts another faction mobilizing to overthrow it.

There is no question that in this country today, in our internal affairs, we are living in fear "and the possibility of such a conflict" which is "of definite concern to the people of the United States."

During the present "momentary relaxation" it may be an "opportune time" to consider that "if threats continue, it seems inevitable" that we will "become involved in common ruin" and that we are not, of necessity, prisoners of destiny.

Domestic Issues Are Complex, Too

AND THAT FURTHER, if "in conference rooms as in courts" we "enter upon the discussion in good faith, assuming that substantial justice will accrue" to all, "the cause of . . . peace would be greatly advanced."

The President was right in saying to Hitler that our international problems are complex, and that we know that the study and discussion of them must be held in an atmosphere that is not overshadowed by threats.

Our domestic problems are equally complex. But every discussion which we have been holding for the last six years has been overshadowed by the mobilized threat of the force of pressure groups.

No one can pretend, for instance, that the recent coal strike, which involved a conflict of viewpoints between two large trade union organizations and eventually brought in the Government, was settled according to impartial deliberation and without the threat of force.

No one can pretend that the settlement of the issue of organization or nonorganization is being settled in Harlan County, Ky., without the threat of force.

Wagner Act Used as Pressure

AND THE WAGNER labor relations act, whose purpose—according to its own first paragraph—is to remove the settlement of labor disputes from the domain of force, is not instrumented to do so but, on the contrary, is so framed that it can be used as an instrument of pressure.

The deliberations of Congress are constantly threatened by the power forces of the Executive, and the Executive mobilizes pressure, through press conferences and over the radio, to influence Congressional measures.

No one can pretend that the discussion of recovery has been conducted during this Administration in an atmosphere free of force or the threat of force.

The problem of recovery is a complex one, on which various groups of economists hold various ideas.

One group believes that the prolonged depression is due to a permanent and ineradicable illness in capitalist economy due to a permanent slow-down in population and technological growth; that there is a glut of savings; that these must be tapped by Government spending, and that under all the circumstances deficit financing is a permanent and desirable condition.

New Deal Clings To One Theory

ANOTHER GROUP believes that this is a puerile simplification; that continued deficit financing will lead us to ruin inside a capitalist economy and will eventually destroy democracy; they believe that the present depression is due to under-investment; that this under-investment is in turn due to numerous causes, among them being dis-economic taxation. Government competition with business on unfair terms in certain areas; an artificial pyramiding of costs, assisted by Government policies, and the subjecting of the economy to periodic shocks and continued uncertainty.

The proponents of the latter theory point out that, although contraction of population is even more marked in Great Britain and Sweden than it is in the United States, and, although the possibilities of large horizontal technological expansions are certainly no greater than they are here, those countries made remarkable recoveries during the time that we have been thrashing around, and that this should at least lead to an open-minded reconsideration of policy.

But the New Deal is committed to the first theory and it stubbornly refuses to consider that it may be wrong.

To defend its theory it has constantly mobilized large groups of the population, who think that they have profited from this theory, to prevent the theory from being reasonably considered in an atmosphere free from force or the threat of force.

No administration in our history—as far as I can remember—has ever so systematically whipped up public opinion to affect deliberations while they were in process.

NOW, ACCORDING to the President's own message to Mr. Hitler, with which this column agrees, you can never get peace this way and you can never get recovery. What you can do is drive the country into a latent civil war.

The process which the President recommended to Mr. Hitler for international deliberations is the essential process of democratic government. No one saw it more clearly than the Founding Fathers of this country—who did not confound democratic government with pressure group anarchy.

Democratic government is not the outcome of a policy of buying off discontent, or of appeasement of aggressors, or even of a stalemate between economic forces. Democratic government is agreement, through deliberation, in the interests of the whole.

What we have had in the last three years in our domestic life are a series of Munich pacts, which appease nothing—except for a moment—and lead to new crises.

Heads of governments in this hour are literally responsible for the fate of humanity in the coming years."

Japan Makes 'Desperate' Bid For U.S. Loans

Establishes Official Finance Mission In Wall Street Area

By Walter Fitzmaurice,
International News Service Staff Writer.

Diplomatic quarters yesterday disclosed the Japanese government has established an official finance mission in the United States for the first time in history in a "desperate" effort to secure loans for developing occupied Chinese areas and prosecuting the Sino-Japanese war.

Well informed sources said certain elements in the Japanese cabinet consider the mission's efforts may spell the difference between the success or failure of Japan's aspiration for a "new order in Asia," welding Japan, Manchukuo and China in an economic, political and cultural bloc.

The mission's furniture and files, it was learned, were moved on Saturday into an office at 120 Broadway, in New York's Wall Street district, at orders of T. Nishiyama, director of the Yokohama Specie Bank, whose services the government borrowed to direct the loan negotiations. Nishiyama formerly headed the bank's New York branch.

Decision to set up the mission assertedly was taken after a search for loans in London, Paris, Amsterdam and Geneva had confirmed the existence of a virtual world-wide credit boycott against Japan.

Diplomatic sources understood Nishiyama has been authorized to borrow up to $500,000,000 on the credit of the Japanese government and to extend cabinet guarantees of equality of treatment for American business in the Chinese provinces held by Japan.

Notwithstanding Nishiyama's asserted willingness to offer extremely attractive interest rates, an American official source expressed belief he is unlikely to obtain "even a millionth part" of the maximum sum he is said to seek.

A well informed source pointed out that American banks have refused to underwrite Japanese loans ever since the State Department, in 1929, vetoed a projected $30,000,000 issue by J. P. Morgan & Co., for the South Manchuria Railway. This source said the department recently had informed the financial community its policy stands unchanged respecting loans to Japan.

Ample confirmation of the United States Government's attitude, he added, was afforded unofficial Japanese missions in a three-year hunt for loans covering every important bank in New York, Chicago and San Francisco. In each instance the missions were told loans were out of the question so long as the State Department stood opposed.

To disarm State Department opposition, a responsible source revealed literally hundreds of Japanese industrialists and politicians in the last 18 months have paraded to Washington, asking President Roosevelt's mediation in the Chinese-Japanese conflict.

The department, it was learned, has rejected the mediation proposals unequivocally.

Washington's highest military quarters link Nishiyama's mission with reports the war has brought the Japanese treasury to "the bottom of the bin" in getting foreign exchange for oil and scrap-iron imports.

A high official said this Government had learned that the loading of Japanese tankers at Los Angeles had been held up days on end, in recent weeks, due to insistence of the Standard of California and associated oil companies for dollar cash in hand before loading.

6,000 in N. Y. Protest British Palestine Policy

New York, May 21 (AP).—A capacity crowd of 6,000 at the Hippodrome denounced the British government's White Paper on Palestine today.

The meeting, under the auspices of the National Emergency Committee for Palestine, resolved that "we condemn the action of the British government which proposes the revocation of the solemn pledge of the Balfour declaration, the repudiation of its trusteeship and the usurpation of the rights over Palestine, and dooms the Jewish people to the status of a restricted, tolerated minority . . .

Mayor LaGuardia attributed the White Paper to recent harassment of the British by other powers, and added that he still had confidence in "the fair play, the generosity and the understanding of the British people themselves."

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, said:

"It will be a sad day for British prestige . . . when the whole world realizes that so-called appeasement has been extended to every petty bomb thrower."

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise said the Jews "will not resort to violence but will offer resistance peacefully."

Arabs Picket Meeting

Boston, May 21 (AP).—Members of the Arab National League, bearing placards attacking "alien domination" of their race, picketed a Jewish mass meeting today at Faneuil Hall.

Gov. Saltonstall, addressing the Jewish meeting, declared the United States "shares the indignation and sympathy universally felt by all free countries when one race suffers from an attack upon democracy and liberty . . ."

of the tenacity and solidarity of the people in support of the Constitution and representative government.

Earlier, after they had joined with the vast audience in . . . "Onward Christian Soldiers," they had listened to Dr. Oliver J. Hart, chaplain of the District chapter of the order, ask a prayer for "the President of the United States and all in civil authority . . ." and had stood with lowered heads as "Taps" were sounded by Principal Musician Winifred Kemp, United States Marine Corps.

A few minutes later, the throng sat back while a message was delivered from Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, of the District National Guard, who warned that 10,000,000 dead on battlefields was an ever-present remembrance of the need of the spirit of brotherhood.

Bishop Freeman Speaks

Following Brig. Gen. Cox's message, the purple and white-robed Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, advised the audience the service was being held with a deeper note of solemnity than in previous years. Behind him sat the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the Cathedral, and other dignitaries.

Bishop Freeman said general apostacy, neglect of sacred things, abandonment of God, would mean ultimate destruction.

Bankhead suggested a three fold-program to keep America out of war, insisting, in the first place, that "we should take every reasonable precaution to place our armed forces upon the highest plane of efficiency to meet any attack from any quarter upon the continental United States or any part of the Western Hemisphere.

"We should reassure the American people that there is no disposition or intention upon the part of this Government to engage in any act of aggression beyond our own territory or to use our armed forces to fight upon foreign soil," he declared.

Bankhead urged that "we should use every moral persuasion at our command to preserve the peace of the world without provocative implications of any kind on our part." He said he did not share the apprehension of others that a world war is inevitable.

Citing the biblical admonition that "they that take the sword shall perish by the sword," and, recalling the death of Caesar and the defeat of Napoleon, he added that "there are other ambitious men who still have the chance to profit by their example."

Seated behind the Speaker were other participating dignitaries, including Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House; Maj. Arlington A. McCallum, chaplain general, Military Order of the World War, all of whom joined in the procession from the "bowl," led by Col. Walter W. Burns, of the Coast Artillery Corps, District of Columbia National Guard, grand marshal, and his 260th Coast Artillery District of Columbia National Guard Band.

Lieut. Col. Charles Demonet, Lieut. Col. Robert P. Parrott and Maj. Russell P. Freeman were in charge of the four main divisions of the color guards, assisted by Commander R. S. Parr, Capt. Paul M. Filmer and Maj. William R. Metz.

Marching in the first unit were the 260th C. A. C. Band, the Washington Provisional Brigade, the Third U. S. Cavalry, the Sixteenth U. S. Field Cavalry, Marine Corps, Navy Yard and other groups. Behind them stepped the National Indian War Veterans, Military Order of Foreign Wars, the Twenty-ninth Division Association, the Spanish War Nurses, Irish War Veterans of the United States and hundreds of others.

Headed by the red-coated Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, the third division included National and D. C. Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, the National and D. C. Societies of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Women's Relief Corps, Dames of the Loyal Legion, the Mayower Society and other patriotic organizations.

Black-bonneted Salvation Army lassies and their blue-uniformed colleagues; gray-veiled members of the Gray Ladies, red-turbaned Almas Templars, white and purple garbed delegates of Job's Daughters, Girl and Boy Scouts and scores of others participated.

Flies Wake Baby Up Too Early?

Here's what to do. In the afternoon, after baby's nap, close nursery windows and doors. Use a good sprayer and fill the room with a mist of Bee Brand Insect Spray. Let the room stay closed for 15 minutes. Keep baby out. When you go back, the only flies will be dead ones on the floor.

Don't confuse Bee Brand Spray with other insecticides. It has no nasty kerosene smell—only a clean cedar fragrance that soon disappears. And Bee Brand really kills flies, mosquitoes and other flying insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use in the home. Don't waste money on cheap, weak, smelly stuff. Get Bee Brand and get rid of flies. Insist on the genuine, quick-killing Bee Brand Insect Spray—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. 17¢ ½-pt.; 29¢ pt.; 49¢ qt.

NOTE: You can also kill flies and mosquitoes, as well as roaches and ants, with Bee Brand Insect Powder. Read directions on can.

BACKACHE
STOP GETTING UP NIGHTS

When the delicate filtering tubes of the kidneys become less active, waste, excess acids and poisons are apt to linger in the blood, then the kidneys often need a good stimulus just as do the bowels. It doesn't do the blood any good to retain these harmful materials which should be filtered out by the kidneys.

To gently stimulate kidneys and help them to function more properly get a 35 cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—a grand, safe and harmless kidney diuretic and stimulant right from Haarlem in Holland.

But be sure and ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the pure—the original and genuine Haarlem Oil Capsules. Don't be an easy mark and accept a cheap substitute—look for the Gold Medal on the box.

At times other symptoms of sluggish kidney action may be puffiness under the eyes—nervousness—leg pains and moist palms. 35 cents. —Adv.

Vandenberg and Taft Receptions Preview a Party Convention

Supporters Greet Both G. O. P. Hopes for 1940 as 'Mr. President;' Ohio Senator Host At Musicale; Michigan Party Is Informal

By Elizabeth Henny

The social scene in Washington yesterday had a decided political flavor with two Republican "presidential possibilities" of 1940, hosts at receptions in town. Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, received from dusk to dark at their Wardman Park Hotel apartment, and at the same time, Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft, of Ohio, were entertaining several hundred guests at a musicale in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Raleigh.

At both events informal political talk was the order of the day, and many an ardent supporter greeted his host with "Good-afternoon Mr. President," in hopeful, if not prayerful tones.

At the Vandenberg apartment, the Senator in informal summer whites, greeted the guests at the door, and in the drawing room stood Mrs. Vandenberg with the honor guest of the afternoon, Mrs. John O. Herrick. Mrs. Herrick, who is also widely known as Genevieve Forbes Herrick, is a former newspaperwoman and now a member of the staff of a magazine. The occasion was also Mrs. Herrick's birthday, though only her close friends knew it beforehand. Those who did, brought presents, which Mrs. Herrick hastily hid, saying with a merry twinkle, "Isn't it fun to have your twenty-ninth birthday?"

Mrs. Vandenberg was gowned in chartreuse crepe, fashioned floor length, with elbow sleeves, a V-neckline and a corded matching belt. Mrs. Herrick, looking most attractive with her upswept hair-do, wore a floor-length polkadot gown with white dots on a blue background. Mr. Herrick, husband of the guest of honor, was on hand, too, greeting his many friends. Also in the spotlight was Arthur Vandenberg, jr., who assisted generally throughout the afternoon.

Birthday Cake Iced in Purple

A definitely informal party, the dining table was centered with a large birthday cake with "Geno," nickname of Mrs. Herrick, written in icing on the cake. Though no birthday candles topped the cake, the icing was shaded from mauve to deep purple, Mrs. Herrick's favorite colors.

Also in the receiving line was Mrs. Warren Wheaton, formerly of Washington and now of Philadelphia, who with her husband is in town for a brief stay. Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, stopped in, as did Mrs. George Barnett, who was gowned in a navy and white ensemble. Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce was noted, as were Senator and Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims.

Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock was there, as was the Director of the U. S. Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, who came on from the R. Walton Moore garden party. Others included Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

Also noted were Senator Arthur Capper, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who generally assisted in the dining room; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, Clarence Hewes and the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Madame Boncesco.

Authors and Journalists Among Many Guests

Pendleton Hogan, the author, was seen chatting with Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes and her London publisher, Douglas Jerrold.

Also with Mrs. Keyes were Mr. and Mrs. Julian Messner, of New York. Mrs. George Allen was glimpsed, trimly turned out in a pink tailored suit with a rakish felt hat to match. Still others included Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, the latter in a red and white print, set off with a red, wide brimmed straw hat; Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, and Miss Dorothy Tirrell.

Among the newspaper friends of the host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Walker S. Buel, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, the latter widely known as Doris Fleeson; Mrs. J. Fred Essary, who was smartly attired in a pink tailored suit and hat to match; Mrs. Edwin Gableman, Edward Weintal, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tufty, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Armstrong, Turner Catledge, Mr. and Mrs. JaJmes Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Hayden and Miss Maxine Davis, author and magazine writer.

During the same hours, Senator and Mrs. Taft were receiving at a musicale at the Raleigh. Their guests included some 300 members of the Ohio State Society and members of the Ohio delegation in Congress. This was the first reception the Taft's have had for the society since Senator Taft assumed the presidency of the society early last spring.

Mrs. Taft was gowned in a printed crepe frock with a small veiled hat trimmed with flowers. She and the Senator and the officers of the society received at the door of the ballroom in a smaller room banked with gladioli, spring flowers and palms.

A special feature of the afternoon was the presentation of songs and piano solos by the Madrigal Singers, of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. In a theatrical setting, flanked by flickering tapers in many branched candelabra, and under the direction of John A. Hoffman, they presented a program of exquisite music to a most attentive audience.

Following the recital, the guests were ushered into a banquet room where a long table offered all varieties of refreshments and small tables were grouped conveniently here and there about the room for the guests to seat themselves.

Shouse Supper Goes Outside

The party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse at their country home near Vienna, Va., Wolf Trap Farm, started out to be a mint julep party but developed into a buffet supper under the trees.

Soup was served from a great iron kettle over an open fire outdoors. Delicious Virginia ham, salad and other picnic food was served to complete the menu. A bar had been set up in the garden near the house and officiating as bartenders were Dr. Ned Ellison and Capt. Robert Munroe. Mrs. William P. MacCracken served salad from a large glass bowl.

Guests arrived at about 5 o'clock in the afternoon and stayed on until nearly midnight. A beautiful evening developed, with stars hung in a sapphire sky, a cool breeze, new moon coming up, all the props for a perfect love scene. Even soft music from an orchestra on a platform.

The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins drove out from Washington, as did the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Louden, the latter wearing a blue knit suit with a matching top coat and a white straw hat. The former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley were noted, she in a white outfit with daisy-crowned toque to match; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge, Arthur Krock, George T. Summerlin with his daughter-in-law, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., and Anne Perrin, in a smart spring print.

Mr Shouse's daughters, Miss Betty Shouse, in a greet print, and her sister, Miss Marion Shouse, in blue, were assisting.

Mrs. Higginson Rogers was wearing a white fishnet turban with her black and white print frock, and Mme. Prochnik, who came with her husband, the former Austrian Minister, and their daughter, Mrs. John de Sibour, was busy rounding up committees for the benefit to be held at Wolf Trap Farm on June 3.

Also noted among the guests were Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, Sherlick Davis, E. W. Pavenstedt, the Second Secretary of the French Embassy, Baron Baeyens and Baronne Baeyens; the Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Lucet and the Attache of the French Embassy, Count Gabriel de Gramont and Countess de Gramont.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

The spotlight in the Hunt Country last week-end centered on two large and very gay parties, that drew notables by the hundreds from all the sourrounding countryside . . . the reception given by William H. Lipscomb at his home "Raspberry Farm" in Leesburg on Saturday afternoon and the garden party yesterday at Fairfax, given by R. Walton Moore of the State Department and his sisters, the Misses Moore.

It was the Moores annual garden party and between 500 and 600 guests came in between the hours from 4.30 to 7 o'clock. Flowers were in full bloom in a riot of color in the gardens and spacious lawns.

Miss Margaret Moore and Miss Jennie Moore received in the house and Mr. Moore welcomed guests on the wide back veranda. On the lawn Miss Helen Moore presided over the refreshments and saw that each guest received a plate of delicious food.

A number of young girls in long teagowns assisted Miss Moore during the afternoon. They included Miss Nancy McCandlish, niece of Mr. Moore, and her classmate at Sweet Briar, Miss Elizabeth McGuire; Miss Jane Kent, Miss Mary Arthur Talcott, of Richmond; Miss Elizabeth Ogilby and Miss Isabelle Ogilby, of Washington, and Miss Eleanor Rust, of Fairfax, Va.

THE GOVERNOR of Virginia and Mrs. Price headed the long list of guests which included diplomats, Government officials and prominent socialites. Noted among them were Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Thomas Randolph Keith, a sister of Mr. Moore; Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Miss Ida V. Guffey and Mrs. Pauletta Guffey.

Also Mrs. Baldwin Day Spillman, former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Representative and Mrs. Harry Englebright, of California; Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Robert W. Woolley, Finis Garnett, Mr. and Mrs. George Rothwell Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Representative and Mrs. Howard Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Lewis and many, many others.

ON SATURDAY Mr. Lipscomb entertained at a party that began with cocktails and a "stay-on-to-super" party with music and dancing and lasted until long after midnight. Even a thunderstorm after dark, which brought rain in torrents and quenched the lights, failed to dim the spirits of the guests. Candles and lanterns were rapidly assembled and the party went merrily on.

Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, as usual, held court, as did Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, who was receiving many friends at one end of the lawn, where colored musicians were playing for a small colored lad doing jig steps and tap dances on a platform.

Among others noted during the afternoon were Miss Margaret Byrd and her father, Thomas Bolling Byrd, Harry Byrd, jr., Baron and Baroness von Pagenhardt, Mr. and Mrs. Courtland H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. William Seipp, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, Mr. and Mrs. T. Walter Fred and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas.

Also Dr. and Mrs. Charles Howze, Capt. and Mrs. Richard Kirkpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Buchanan, Miss Harriet Flemming and her guests, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Etheridge, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Louis C. Jeffries, Mrs. Morton Schwartz, Mrs. Ruth Wardell, Col. and Mrs. John Butler, Mrs. Mary Lipscomb Jamison, Miss Fanny Nelson Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. John Crosby and hundreds more.

Mrs. Keyes Fetes Douglas Jerrold

Honoring Douglas Jerrold, of London, the British publisher of her books, Mrs. Frances Parkinsen Keyes entertained yesterday at a New England breakfast at her apartment.

Mr. Jerrold, who arrived in Washington Saturday afternoon and left again late last evening, is a director of the firm of Eyre & Spottiswoode, one of the oldest publishing houses in the world. He comes from a family of literary people, and has written his biography in "Georgian Adventure," published by Scribner's. His greatgrandfather, whose name was also Douglas Jerrold, was publisher of "Punch," a playright, and wrote the well-known old play, "Black-Eyed Susan."

Mr. Jerrold came to this country for a business conference with Mrs. Keyes and has just signed her up for a series of three novels to be published within the next five years. It is a similar contract to that which Mrs. Keyes just signed with her American publishers and marks the first time Mrs. Keyes has ever made an agreement to write more than one novel at a time.

Mrs. Keyes will spend this summer in Europe to gather material and will stop in London to complete publishing arrangements. Since the publication in London of her volume, "Senator Morrow's Daughter," the firm of Eyre & Spottiswoode have been the London publishers of all of Mrs. Keyes' books. Her books, by the way, became best sellers in England before they did in the United States.

Also at the luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. Julian Messner, of New York, directors of the American publishing house that has brought out many of Mrs. Keyes' books in this country.

Also among the guests were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Representative and Mrs. Foster Stearns, Maj. and Mrs. Sidney Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hurd, Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Miller, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, Mrs. Ruth Shipley, John Walsh, Courtland Baker and Mrs. Daniel Long.

Exercise Displaces Fat, but Not Eating Pie Is Much Easier

WE TAKE IT all back! Exercise can be reducing! We always say "diet to take off pounds, exercise to take off inches," and because the chances are pretty slim that the average reducer will get enough exercise to make any difference in his or her weight. But here's a letter that suggests reducers may be made of more Spartan stuff than we realized:

"You should make up your mind on the question whether exercise does or doesn't take off the pounds. One minute, you say it does; the next minute you say no.

"If you can take stock in the experience of one who trimmed a very old 5-feet 6-inch carcass from 185 pounds down to 134—through exercise, without resort to trick diets—take it from me: Exercise is a powerful factor in reducing. Fat refuses to dwell with active muscles. And don't you tell me otherwise."

Blame It on Mind

All right, all right! You certainly do not have to resort to trick diets in order to take off weight . . . all it should ever take is intelligent eating! But our athletic reducer (a man, by the way) either went into intensive training to exercise off those 51 pounds, or else his subconscious mind prudently cut a few calories here and there.

Exercise increases the oxidizing and consuming processes of the body and accelerates weight loss, but it does not burn up the calories as fast as you can leave them out of your menus. For instance, a man weighing 154 pounds, engaging in very severe exercise for one hour, could burn up 600 calories. He would take approximately that same number of calories in a generous portion of pie a la mode. So, as far as weight reduction goes, it would be easier to leave off the dessert.

None of which should be construed to mean that exercise is being belittled in a reducing program. The ideal program is a combination of diet and exercise. Your exercise will permit you to lose weight on a more liberal diet—and the more food you can eat and reduce, the better you will look and feel.

Replaces Fat

Besides, exercise develops muscle tissue at the same time that it wears down fat, and muscle tissue is firm and compact, whereas fatty tissue is bulky and expansive. If you want to trim down certain measurements or remake your figure entirely, you'll take your exercise very seriously.

With summer sports coming on, every one of you overweights (excepting those with high blood pressure or a cardiac disturbance) should be able to step up your programs through outdoor exercise, which is the most pleasant and healthful variety. But, just a word of caution: "Don't expect to lose weight through exercise if you overeat. It can't be done.

Gimcrack Typewriter Co.,
New York, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

Would it be possible for you to stop making improvements in typewriters? I am completely fed up—to speak plainly—with having to remaster the intricacies of putting on a ribbon every time one of your new models comes out.

Back in the good old days before typewriter machinery was put under automobile hoods, I could at least see what I was doing when I changed a ribbon. Now I need a flashlight, rubber gloves and a set of garage mechanics' tools. After the operation I require a Turkish bath, alcohol rub, a shampoo and a manicure. Also the multiplicity of levers, push buttons and other gadgets makes me as uncomfortable as an array of forks at a fancy dinner. If this be machine age efficiency, give me the safety and comfort of a quill pen. Yours truly, (Miss) MAISIE DOE.

Veneer Furniture Co.,
New York, N. Y.
Gentlemen:

I have ruined three pairs of stockings in one week on one of your handsome office chairs. How about designing a splinterless seat for the benefit of feminine office help? Yours truly,
(Miss) MAISIE DOE.

To My Office Colleagues:

No, I do not know how to spell "separate," whether this is the twenty-first or twenty-second, or what the number of the zoo is. Also, I couldn't tell whether your telephone call was from your mother, your boy friend or the man from the collection agency.
MAISIE.

Janitors Protective Association,
John Q. Whipper Co.
Dear Sirs:

If your passion for neatness could find expression in dusting the seats of chairs instead of rearranging the papers on my desk, everybody would be a lot happier. Also, why is the busiest hour in an office on a windy day, the psychological moment for window washing? Yours truly,
MISS DOE.

Mr. John Q. Whipper,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Boss:

How about going in for a little special training in memory and concentration? You dictate enough letters to keep me busy for hours, and 10 or 15 minutes later ring your buzzer to find out if the letters are ready to be signed. Or, you give me a bunch of dictation just before closing time and the next morning demand the letters before I have had time to dust your wife's picture or fill your thermos bottle. Another thing, I am not a mind reader, and when you tell me to bring you a perisphere, how am I to know you want a road map? Yours sincerely, MAISIE DOE.

Mrs. John Q. Whipper,
13 Honeysuckle road,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Madame:

Just a line to tell you it is not at all necessary to treat me with such frigid politeness and veiled suspicion. I know perfectly well what you have to put up with and I would not have your husband on a bet. What is more, I have a beau—with all his hair and teeth. Yours respectfully,
MAISIE DOE (Sec.).

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Logan Clendenning

Preventing Cancer

Is cancer increasing? More deaths from cancer are reported each year. Some attribute this increase to increasing age of the population; some to improved methods of diagnosis; others to a real increase in the occurrence of cancer.

What is the difference between a benign and a cancerous growth? Benign growths usually have a limiting membrane. They never spread to other parts of the body. Malignant cells grow among normal cells and prevent the latter from functioning normally. Unless adequately treated, cancer cells spread to other parts of the body.

How can we tell if a growth is cancer? By examining a small portion of the suspected tissue under the microscope.

Is pain an early symptom of cancer? No, except in cancer of bone or nerve tissue. Pain usually is a late symptom and when it occurs the growth is often far advanced.

Early Cancer Signs

What are some of the early signs of cancer?

1. A persistent lump, especially in a woman's breast.
2. A sore that does not heal, particularly about the face, mouth or lips.
3. An unnatural bloodstained discharge from a natural body opening.
4. Sudden changes in size or color of moles and warts.

Are all breast lumps cancer?

Not more than 10 to 15 per cent are cancer. Only by a careful examination can be it be definitely determined.

Do freckles ever turn into cancer?

Mary Haworth's Mail

When Girl Has Suffered From Nervous Illness; Has She the Right to Marry and Have Children?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some years ago I had a nervous breakdown, spent some time in a sanitarium and, to all outward appearances, recovered in a few months. Less than two years later I had another breakdown, this time more serious. I was, in fact, committed to a State institution for approximately six months, after which I was discharged as cured. Since that time I have felt so completely well that I have almost entirely forgotten the whole experience.

However, every once in a while I read in the newspapers of someone who had once been committed to an institution, again slipping into the blank past; and, in many instances, committing some crime while in that irresponsible state. That's what frightens me so. I am still on the sunny side of 30, am nice looking and have no trouble at all in supporting myself comfortably. In fact, no one knows of my past and everyone takes me at face value—which is the same as that of any intelligent, independent girl in her latter twenties.

However, I do want a husband, home and children, and as the years slip by, I wonder if I am entitled to them, in view of the unfortunate past. I am going with a fine young man who might very well propose marriage to me at any time. Do you think it would be fair to marry him without telling him of my illness? I doubt that he would want to marry me, if he knew. And, supposing I were to allow myself a few more years in which to test the validity of my recovery, do you think I would have a chance, in the early thirties, to attract a man who would be willing to share his life with me, in spite of my past? Sincerely yours,
ANONYMOUS.

Admirable Question

DEAR ANONYMOUS: This, obviously, is a case in which it would be sheer presumption for a layman to venture an authoritative pronouncement. Only those specialists who are acquainted with the nature of the factors which precipitated your earlier illness could say whether future recurrences are likely; or whether it is a malady which time and intelligent care may be expected to overcome. And they, of course, would be basing their opinions as much upon their knowledge of comparable cases, as upon their knowledge of your individual history.

However, I would be inclined to accept your laudable fair-mindedness, in considering the possibility of marriage, as evidence of an essentially sound character—and where you have the groundwork of excellent character, you have the best of materials with which to build sound mental and adequate physical health, even when some of the parts may once have been dislocated or injured. Also, there is nothing necessarily peculiar, in the sense of being eccentric, about your nervous fright when reading newspaper accounts of persons with a record of hospitalization, who relapse into conditions of mental irresponsibility.

All persons of extraordinary sensitivity, of the type which today is popularly called "neurotic," who, as a result of their first brushes with the world of intimidating reality, passed through periods of psychic or social or emotional maladjustment, before straightening out into some philosophical, healthful and rational acceptance of "things as they are"—all such persons inevitably experience recurrent melancholy shocks, during the middle phase of their convalescence, when confronted, from time to time, with painful reminders of their own former plight.

Since you find newspaper accounts of a special classification of tragic happenings to be an upsetting mental diet—as, indeed, do most persons of vivid imagination and exquisite perception—my advice to you is to make a point, deliberately, of passing over them. It is quite as important to be selective in one's mental diet as in one's physical diet, after one has isolated the occasion or item of distress. One is making for health in determinedly resisting any neurotic "compulsion"—such as might be implicit in your hunting out and brooding over, those news items which currently chill your marrow. A few years hence, perhaps, when your recovery is well advanced, such items may automatically relinquish special claim to your attention. But, in the meantime, make a rational contribution to your sense of well being by feeding your mind with wholesome thought-content, while deliberately excluding depressing material.

Now, as to whether, in view of your record of ill health, you have the right to marry: the answer to that question can best be supplied by a specialist in biology and pathology. But it is my opinion that you should, in justice, be absolutely frank with any man who had proposed marriage and whom you would consider marrying. If his devotion to you is genuine love—of a firmly founded, protective and chrishing kind—he will, in all probability, elect to marry you, even so, and accept the remote risk of a future relapse, if your health record has been consistently encouraging since the earlier attacks. But if and when the time comes that you are seriously considering marriage to a given man, be guided by the advice of those specialists who were instrumental in mending your health. The man who aspires to make you his wife should be given opportunity freely to consult with them concerning your latent weaknesses and handicaps, so that both will know how to build securely in the projected partnership.

It would be my thought—unless, of course, your medical advisers take a more optimistic view—that children might constitute an unwise risk. Whereas you might be adjudged to have every right to the consolations of marriage, so long as you and your husband are willing to accept the hazard of your constitutional frailty—I am hesitant to say that you would be justified in transmitting that element of frailty to future generations. I wonder if it would be wise or kind. I dare say you would not like to think of your children suffering as you must have suffered in the past. But this, again, is a question for the specialist to pass upon, if you wish an authoritative judgment.

Your misgivings as to whether you will be sufficiently attractive, in the early thirties, to compel a man's love, are without foundation. The modern woman's attractiveness to men increases, in a steadily ascending curve, during the years from 20 to approximately 40. The girl who has been attractive to men in her twenties usually finds that her magnetism has increased by the time she reaches her thirtieth birthday, if she has been creatively concerned with self-improvement. She has a fund of interests, a repertory of accomplishments, a poise of personality, and a range and depth of sympathy and understanding, after 30, which make her a far more satisfying companion for the average man than she would have been five or ten years earlier.

Therefore, I think you are displaying sound judgment in deciding to allow yourself "a few more years in which to test the validity of your recovery." In another five years, if and as your health improves, you may find yourself not only a more attractive woman than you are today, hence capable of attracting a higher-type husband than you might accept today; but you may have entirely outgrown all dubiety, and all occasion for dubiety, such as overcasts your horizon today, and thus be ready to enter wholeheartedly, under the happiest auspices, into the experience of marriage.

Enlarge Your Stamp Collection

HOW YOUR collection soars in interest, in value, when you add stamps of little-known lands! Fun to get off the beaten track—and luckily such stamps may cost very little.

Two stamps came from distant Africa. Typical of Nyassaland stamps is one showing a giraffe. The other, from Zanzibar, was issued in honor of its sultan on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his reign.

Did you ever hear of Perak? The stamp comes from that small country—one of the Federated Malay States. This is the first of its stamps to bear a picture of its current ruler.

Of course, knowing how to mount stamps correctly is important to your collection, too. Attach one-fifth of the hinge to the top of the stamp, the balance to the page of your stamp album—so that the stamp can be examined front and back.

How to identify stamps of various countries? Usually words on them give the clue. Helvetia appears on stamps from Switzerland, Norge on Norwegian stamps, Sen on Japanese stamps. Or there may be an identifying symbol. Latvia for instance, puts a curious cross on its stamps.

Ho wto determine the value of your stamps—detect differences in perforations, watermarks? These and many other questions are answered in our 40-page booklet, "A Guide to Stamp Collecting." Gives advice on albums, equipment, sources from which to get stamps.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "A Guide to Stamp Collecting." to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

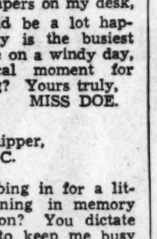
A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

THERE'S A LONDON newspaperwoman visiting our town right now who certainly has a swell sense of what makes a good yarn for her British public. I found myself sitting next to the lady, whose name is Evelyn Irons, at a cosy tea-rassle given by lovely Ruth Fay, and did Evelyn stick the iron into my soul with a likely story!



ALICE HUGHES

The burden of Evelyn's tale is that our poky little city has let her down badly. She sailed up the bay primed and ready for the breakneck pace for which New York was said to be famous. She had her running shoes on. And imagine her astonishment, she says, to find that our pace is one that chills instead of kills. Her disillusionment began with the customs men on the dock. "Be calm, sister—take it easy. Why hurry?" they said, she says. She further deposes that the taxi waddled on its way to her hotel, while the driver discoursed at great length on life, love and death as our drivers do.

Once at the inn, she found a quiet room, no air-conditioning, and—believe this or not—no television set. Fifth Avenue's fabled bustle also let her down. Instead of people knocking her over in a rush for a new snood, she found them lazily window-shopping and calmly waiting their turns with the sales-persons. All in all, Miss Irons told me, between sips of heady tomato juice, that she felt collapsed by our lack of dizzy pace. New York, she avers, moves in a slow minuet instead of in swing-time.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Local girls were plunged into gloom when they heard that their dream prince, Francho' Tone, had cravenly sneaked into the New York Hospital for an operation. Not one was invited. Tone's show closed three weeks ago, and he will probably go to the Coast when he gets back on his feet, leaving New York a desert. Well, that is my family hospital, too, and I must get on the phone and see which of our delightful nurse friends drew the short straw and is taking care of the wonder man.

Discretion Is The Better Part of Rouge

Use too little rouge, rather than too much.

Always strive for a natural effect. The shade is vitally important. It should be the color that your natural color is when you are naturally bright with excitement.

Never attempt to apply cream rouge on a powdered face. But do not attempt to apply dry rouge to a moist skin. Use a cotton or a clean puff.

Gentle patting with the fingertips is the best way both to apply and blend the rouge. Go over the edges lightly with tissue, just to make sure they disappear into your skin tone completely.

Apply your rouge in the cruelest, brightest light you can find.

Harlan County Mine Peace Talks Today

U. S. Conciliator Predicts End of Strife This Week

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., May 21.—Conciliators today rested their hopes for a mine contract settlement in the tense Harlan County soft coal field on a scheduled joint conference tomorrow of operators and union representatives.

A Sabbath quiet was maintained throughout the county, marked by sporadic gunfire and violence the past few days, under the watchful eyes of some 1,250 National Guardsmen who began their second week of duty today in this important bituminous area.

The troopers were sent into Harlan County by Gov. A. B. Chandler to "protect all miners who wish to return to work" as operations were resumed, minus a contract, by a score of mines.

Predicts Settlement

Federal Conciliator John Conner said representatives of the operators and the union would hold their conference at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Conner said he and State conciliators already had held separate meetings with each side.

Earlier, Conner predicted "a settlement will be made" this week.

Militia officers said the fatal shooting of a man on a Harlan street today had "no connection" with the labor discord.

A mass meeting scheduled for today was called off by the U. M. W. following issuance of a military order of restrictions by Brig. Gen. Ellerbe Carter, commanding the State troops. District U. M. W. President William Turnblazer said the meeting was canceled "to prevent wholesale arrests." Turnblazer said he sent a telegram to President Roosevelt protesting the regulations.

Officers of union mine locals were summoned to meet, however, to discuss events of the past week.

To Return to Work

Approximately 3,800 miners are expected to return to work tomorrow in Harlan County under new contracts signed by two companies which do not belong to the county operators' association.

The companies are the Black Star Coal Co., at Alva, employing 800 men, and the United States Coal & Coke Co., at Lynch, employing 3,000.

Pole Kills Nazi In Danzig Riots

the border near the Kalthof railway station because the driver was blinded by the brilliant headlights of a parked automobile.

Then, according to this version, Greubner and the taxi driver got out to investigate but decided to return to the taxi without exchanging words with occupants of the other automobile.

The Danzig report alleged Greubner, in civilian clothes, was shot from the rear, in the neck and right shoulder, dying on the spot.

Polish Officials Flee

The occupants of the automobile, according to this version, escaped into the railway station and hopped aboard a locomotive which took them toward Tczew in Poland.

The formal note asserted the passengers in the automobile, which bore Polish license plates, were Tadeuz Perkowski, Polish under commissioner; Dr. Sziller, Polish state railway representative in the Free City, and Herr Swita, Poland's chief customs inspector in the Free City.

These officials, the note said, are "heavily compromised" in that in the car, which the Free City police seized, were found a loaded pistol and an empty magazine for a Mauser pistol.

"The killing shots, according to police experts, without a doubt were fired from a Polish army pistol," the note said.

Insults to Women Charged

The senate's report denied any damage had been done to the Polish customs inspectors' building earlier in the evening, which Poland said was demolished, and asserted quiet had been restored before the shooting occurred at the railway station.

"Enraged" members of the German-Danzig community assembled about 9 p. m. Saturday night before the customs house, the note said, to protest against "the attitude of Polish customs inspectors toward female members of the German-Danzig community."

Local police broke up this demonstration, it said, and quiet was restored by 11:30 p. m.

Poland Blames Nazis

Warsaw, May 21 (AP).—Poland protested to the Senate of the Free City of Danzig today against an attack on a Polish customs post by a crowd it charged was led by "uniformed members of Nazi units."

The incident precipitated a clash in which the Polish chauffeur of Tadeuz Perkowski, Polish undercommissioner in Danzig, shot and killed a Danzig German.

A Polish communique said the attack constituted "an obvious and serious violation of one of the fundamental Polish rights in Danzig, namely, the exercising of customs control."

Poles Demand Security

Two notes regarding the incident were presented to the Danzig Senate by the Polish commissioner of the Free City. One reviewed the incident and the other contained Polish demands for:

A thorough investigation and punishment of the culprits.

Indemnity for damages.

A clear statement on the part of the Danzig Senate as to what guarantees it is making to insure order and security for both Polish officials and the Polish population in Danzig.

The incident, covering a period extending from a late hour of last night into this morning, occurred in the village of Kalthof, on the frontier in Free City territory.

The communique said the customs post was attacked with stones and bullets and the building demolished, leading to the hurried arrival of the undercommissioner.

"On the arrival of the Polish undercommissioner," the communique reported, "the crowd began shooting at his automobile, the chauffeur of which, in order to defend his life, shot and killed one of the assailants after he had fired several warning shots."

The communique charged the Danzig Senate with "endeavoring to reject responsibility for the bloody event" by "spreading false information concerning the incident."

The action of the Danzig Senate in demanding an indemnity and apology for the slaying was termed "insolent" in authoritative Polish circles.

Only the Polish protest, it was said by one source, has any right to consideration.

"Poland," he stated, "expects not only a proper answer to the protest of the Polish commissioner in Danzig but also definite assurances that the security of Polish people in Danzig will be guaranteed and that Polish rights will be respected."

Provocation Charged

Foreign observers regarded the incident as a new and serio strain on Polish-German relations. There was every indication that Poland took a grave view of the matter but it could not be learned whether she planned to take any action beyond the formal protest lodged with the Danzig Senate.

In Polish quarters it was said preliminary investigation had proved that the incident had resulted from what one official called "deliberate provocation, the exact origin of which has not yet been traced definitely.

"Whether this provocation is to be charged against the Danzig Senate or the Nazi Party of Danzig or the Nazis of th Reich (Germany) has yet to be determined.

"Meanwhile, it is an established fact that the assailants at Kalthof, who attacked the car of the Polish commissioner, were all from Marienburg."

Protectorate Reaffirmed

Geneva, May 21 (U.P.).—The League of Nations Committee for Danzig decided tonight in an informal agreement with the Polish government to keep the Free City under protection of the League indefinitely in the tension resulting from Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demands for its restoration to Germany.

Great Britain, France and Sweden, comprising the committee set up after creation of Danzig as a Free City under the Treaty of Versailles, decided that, in theory at least, the League will remain as a guarantor of Danzig's present status despite Hitler's claims.

The object of tonight's decision is to permit Poland to use the League protectorship over Danzig as a bargaining point in her dealings with Germany if the two countries are able to enter into direct negotiations.

Tomorrow Erickson, also under investigation by Federal agents as to his comparatively small income tax payments in recent years, will be arraigned in Long Island City Magistrates' Court on the vagrancy charge.

Following his arrest, Erickson, who lived in a $150,000 Forest Hills mansion, was indicted on a first-degree perjury charge based on his application for a pistol permit. He has been arrested on gambling charges on many occasions, but in his application signed a statement that he had no police record.

Mayor LaGuardia's blast at the bookmaker followed an investigation by Commissioner of Investigations Herlands, who reported that several prominent officials, including judges, policemen and other State and city employes were intimate friends of Erickson and his regular customers.

The name of one New York Supreme Court justice is reported to be on Erickson's list as a debtor of more than $15,000.

a mutual assistance agreement and parallel Franco-Turkish negotiations still are in progress.)

The first provision, it was said, would satisfy Russia, while the second could be so phrased as to limit potential Russian aid to Poland and Rumania to warplanes and equipment, as those two states desire.

Britain made it clear at the League assembly last September that she interpreted the League's punitive provisions against an aggressor as optional.

The Russians, therefore, would accept a three-power pact within the League framework only if Britain formally declared she now considers its punitive measures obligatory, it was said. Lord Halifax will have his chance to make such a statement at the Council session tomorrow.

Aluminum crates, each holding a drugged sledge dog, will be loaded into huge planes for delivery at some distant base inaccessible except by air, it is planned. Opiates will be used because, although explorers long have seen a necessity for flying dog teams inland, dogs thus far have proved unadaptable to the noise and strangeness of airplane flight. They become insane with fear. After one unfortunate experiment, Admiral Byrd suggested that knock-out drops, judicially administered, might offer an humane solution.

Scientific improvements in food and in the manufacture of frost-resistant clothing are expected to eliminate hardships endured by members of other expeditions, but possibly the greatest boon to the expedition will be the radio directional compass.

Several times on recent expeditions Antarctic fliers have returned to their bases scant minutes before sudden fog or snow reduced visibility to zero. This expedition will be equipped with a miniature radio station capable of emitting beam signals over a wide area. It should make a hasty dash back to camp as uneventful as a flight from Newark to Washington.

Moving toward the pole on fixed schedules, tractor parties will deliver gasoline, oil and food at prearranged airplane depots. The planes, in turn, will be able to make quick trips between bases and distant ground parties, dropping rations and other supplies.

Plan to Force Record Vote on Townsend Plan

Agreement by a majority of the Ways and Means Committee to report the Townsend old-age pension plan to the House for a vote, thus placing members on record for the 1940 campaign, was reported reached yesterday.

Tentative plans indicate the bill will be reported without recommendation, with a view to obtaining a House vote upon it, before the committee presents its own recommendations for revision of the social security act.

Democratic members privately expressed belief the strategy would "embarass" Republicans who won election with Townsend club support, and have since argued for Federal economy.

Woman, 63, Hurt In Fall at Church

A 63-year-old woman slipped yesterday on the walk leading from Holy Comforter Church, Fourteenth and East Capitol streets.

The woman, Mrs. Anna L. Light, 702 West Central avenue, Capitol Heights, Md., was treated at Casualty Hospital for a brain concussion, fracture of the right wrist and head cuts.

Fish, Nover, Mgr. Ryan in War of Words

Economics Forum Halted by Dispute Over Post Editorial Roosevelt Approved

Three members of a panel discussing the economics of war staged a miniature war of their own last night over a Washington Post editorial on neutrality which President Roosevelt commended as expressing his own ideas.

The battle of words broke loose among Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York; Mgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, and Barnet Nover, foreign affairs columnist of The Post. The occasion was the seventeenth meeting of the Academy of World Economics, at the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium, where Graham Hutton, British author and economic journal editor, spoke on "The Economics of the Next War."

Following Hutton's remarks, Fish delivered an isolationist oration, in which he declared that Great Britain should have paid its war debts to this country and that America was being overrun with inflammatory propaganda to involve us in a European war.

Father Ryan "Weary" of Talk

Father Ryan, the next speaker, declared he was "weary" of both war-debt and propaganda talk, since the United States refused to allow the payment in British goods, and because he had seen no propaganda in any newspaper or public statements in this country.

Replying, Fish said Great Britain might well have paid the debt in rubber or tea, and as for propaganda, he considered The Post editorial of April 11, calling for a "preponderant show of force" by the democracies to avert a war forced by the dictator nations, as propaganda demanding that the United States go to war for France and England.

Nover answered that Fish had defined propaganda in a new way, as "something you read but do not understand."

18 Months Next Time

At a press conference the day following the editorial's publication, the President had it inserted in the conference minutes so that posterity might see what his views had been.

Hutton's speech, revolving about the economic strains which a modern world war would provoke, dealt with the "enormous wastage" of human and material resources, which he estimated would be about five times the rate of the 1914-1918 conflict. Acknowledging that estimates of a short war at that time were ill-founded, he nevertheless prophesied that a world war now could not last beyond 18 months.

He said, however, that the present "peace" was actually an economic war, and that, even if no actual physical hostilities were declared, a complete change in Western civilization's economic life was inevitable, and would evolve in the next ten years. A physical war, however, would accomplish the change in ten months, he declared.

Democracies in Control

He added that on an economic basis, the balance of power was preponderantly on the side of the democratic nations and Russia, so long as Great Britain kept control of the seas. He argued that it was impossible for the totalitarian powers to overrun their neighbors and at the same time exploit enough of their resources ot keep the German economy equipped for war.

Other members of the panel were Dr. Edward C. Acheson, of George Washington University; Dr. Erik T. H. Kjellstrom, of Georgetown University; Dr. John Lee Coulter, former Tariff Commission member, and Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa. Dr. John Donaldson, academy chairman, presided.

Senator Johnson Urges Guarantee Of Farm Costs

Asserting that the Roosevelt Administration had started on the wrong track in its efforts to help the farmer and "seemingly is too proud to admit failure," Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, appealed yesterday for Congressional approval of legislation guaranteeing farmers the cost of production.

"A tragic mistake is being made," he said in a broadcast, "and the tragic thing is that it is being made by a courageous administration that really wants to help the farmer but apparently does not know how to do it.

"If the farmer were paid the cost of production," Johnson contended, "he could meet his bills and expenses and not need loans, rehabilitation and doles; he would not be a burden upon the Federal Treasury but instead he would contribute in a major way to the general prosperity of the country."

Leah Effenbach In Musical Contest

Leah Effenbach, of 1510 Nineteenth street northwest, who was graduated four years ago from the Peabody Conservatory of Music as a scholarship student, was chosen yesterday by the National Federation of Music Clubs to compete with five other young musicians today for three prizes of $1,000 each and a concert engagement in New York and Philadelphia, the Associated Press reported.

Watching Lights Shimmer and Dance on the Water

Among the thousands who visited Washington's parks yesterday and last night were these children and youths who watched lights flicker on the water. In left picture are Horace and Joan Harper and Eilleen Trexler, who found the grass near the water's edge at Hains Point to their liking. Carolyn Kaethe and Standley Pockal sat at the base of the John Paul Jones statue to watch the sights at the Tidal Basin

Blood Tests of D. C. Drivers On Liquor Urged by Van Duzer

Blood tests for District drivers injured in auto crashes to assure conviction of drunken motorists were urged last night by Traffic Directod William A. Van Duzer and Wilbur Laroe, jr., of the parole board in a public meeting at First Congregational Church.

The speakers who supported the bill introduced in Congress by Representative Reece (Republican), of Tennessee, stressed the importance of the alcohol tests to rid Capital streets of intoxicated drivers. At the same time it would protect those unjustly accused of being under the influence of liquor, they said.

To make Washington's streets safe, it is vital that motorists and pedestrians alike realize the "truth that only a small quantity of whisky makes a man a dangerous driver," Van Duzer said.

Standard tests which would determine scientifically whether a person is under the influence of alcohol would insure guilty verdicts for the drunken motorists in court and reduce the number of habitually intoxicated drivers in Washington, he added.

Tests conducted in 1937 revealed that 50 per cent of persons so examined had more than .0015 alcohol, considered the intoxication point, in their blood streams, the traffic director told the meeting.

Mgr. McCormick Addresses 500 Catholic Alumnae

The Catholic University is more concerned with its responsibility toward America's future than in the glory of its past achievements, the Right Rev. Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick said yesterday morning at the Mayflower Hotel.

Vice rector of Catholic University, now celebrating its golden jubilee, he addressed more than 500 women at the annual breakfast given for 1939 local school graduates by the District of Columbia Chapter of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae. Earlier they attended mass at St. Matthew's Church.

Entertainment at the breakfast was furnished by Miss Helen Hickey and Miss Ann Brosnan, of Immaculata Alumnae; Miss Grace Mary Colliflower, of Trinity Alumnae, and Miss Gertrude Betz, of St. Cecilia's Alumnae.

Rule Given for Flying U. S., British Flags

The American flag should be displayed to the flag's right of the British colors, or the observer's left, it was announced yesterday by Col. James A. Moss, president general of the United States Flag Association, in answer to numerous inquiries prompted by the impending visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth. The rule applies to flags carried in parade, displayed against walls, flown from adjoining staffs or attached to automobiles, Col. Moss said.

French Trade Mission Concludes 3-Day Visit Here

Thirty French businessmen last night left for Pittsburgh after a three-day visit here, praising Washington as "an oasis of verdure" and a "magnificent spectacle of beauty."

Led by Etienne Fougere, president of the Association Nationale pour la Commerce Exterieure, the group is on a tour of American industrial cities, studying American methods and seeking ways to improve trade between the United States and France.

While here they discussed with Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre proposals for a new Franco-American trade treaty, to restore to France advantages enjoyed under the defunct Czecho-Slovakian treaty.

Dies to Re-examine Dudley Gilbert and James Campbell

The Dies Committee Investigating Un-American Activities today will recall Dudley Pierrepont Gilbert, New York socialite, and James Erwin Campbell, of Owensboro, Ky., Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday. Gilbert and Campbell have admitted disseminating reports of alleged "revolutionary plots" hatched in the Harmonie Club at New York.

Dies said John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee; George Deatherage, of St. Albans, W. Va., chief of the Knights of the White Camellia, and Felix McWhirter, Indianapolis banker and Army reserve officer, also probably will be questioned today, Dies said.

Franco Held Propagandist Against U. S.

Del Vayo Declares Agents Are Active In South America

Fascist penetration of Latin America resulting from Franco's victory in Spain is aimed directly at the United States, Alvarez Del Vayo, foreign minister of Spain under the Loyalist government, said here last night.

"Franco's propaganda is already active in South America and will become more so," he said. "This propaganda is naturally directed against the United States.

"A victory for republican Spain would have strengthened South American democracy," Del Vayo declared, pointing out that heretofore "the propaganda of Hitler and Mussolini in South America has been largely unsuccessful.

"In Franco, however, they have found a better vehicle for political penetration, for agitation and dissension, than they had before dreamed of."

Del Vayo, a former American correspondent for Spanish newspapers, spoke at a reception given by the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign in the National Press Club auditorium. After the meeting he left for New York, where he will participate with former Spanish Premier Juan Negrin in a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden.

He spoke briefly in his native tongue to Spaniards in the audience, telling them that it was impossible for Spain to remain under Franco's rule and that it would free itself "much sooner than you expect."

Eric Muggeridge, British chairman of the Spanish Children Foster Parents, appealed for support of the campaign to raise $1,000,000 for refugee relief. He told the audience, "The refugees aren't the real problem—it is aggression. The war in Spain was just a reproduction of aggression everywhere."

Benjamin Elmore, Rail and Civil Engineer, Dies

Benjamin Thomas Elmore, civil engineer and transportation cost analyst, of 103 Locust avenue, Alta Vista, Md., died yesterday at Emergency Hospital of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Elmore was born in 1866 at Mobile, Ala. He was graduated from the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., at 18. He was engaged in railway construction projects, including the Virginia Railway and was a rail valuation expert at the Interstate Commerce Commission 1913 to 1936, when he entered private practice.

He was a member of the Society of American Civil Engineers and the In-Com-Co Club.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Molly DeFord Elmore, he is survived by two sons, Floyd D. Elmore and John Elmore; a daughter, Mrs. Griffith C. Barry, of Cedar Lane, Md., and a brother, Charles W. Elmore, of Chattanooga. Burial services will be private.

He Gets His Man

Richitt was at the Columbia Yacht Club on his day off, painting a boat. A citizen reported a colored man attempting to steal an automobile.

Richitt arrested the offender and dispatched a bystander to call a patrol wagon. While he waited, he was attacked by two other colored men.

After he had fought off the assailants, Richitt took his prisoner to the Fourth Precinct Station, then went to Emergency Hospital for treatment and sent home for clothing to replace that torn from his back in the fight. Later, one of his assailants was captured.

Capital News In Brief

Private Coffman Home

Private William J. Coffman, 23-year-old Metropolitan police rookie who has had more than 55 blood transfusions since a skin irritation developed into a blood infection and pneumonia four months ago was at home last night.

"It's just too good to be true," said his wife, Mrs. Kathleen Scott Coffman. "He was at the hospital for so long, it still just seems like a dream." Coffman was taken to George Washington University Hospital only a month after their wedding.

The trouble developed from a small eruption on the back of Coffman's hand, irritated by the sleeve of his uniform coat. All the blood donors were policemen, except 15-year-old William Skinker, who had recovered from the same trouble two years ago.

Dr. William Sager, police surgeon, will continue to treat Coffman at his home, 118 Fifth street southeast.

Cat Wails All Night

Citizens in the 1500 block of Delafield place northwest slept but sketchily last night, their slumbers broken by wails of a cat up a tree and unable to get down.

First they called police, who tried to climb 35 feet to the cat's perch but gave it up. Then they called the Fire Rescue Squad, which refused assistance since one member of a rescue squad was hurt trying to rescue another treed cat.

So the cat stayed in the tree, having been there since yesterday morning.

$3,500 in Gems Lost

Jewelry valued at $3,500 was lost yesterday by Robert B. Cristell, Bronxville, N. Y., who is staying at the Shoreham Hotel.

Cristell told police that the jewels, a diamond and sapphire ring and a circular pin set with diamonds and sapphires, were lost between the 1800 block of Twenty-fourth street northwest and the hotel. They are insured.

Boy Found Unconscious

With the cause of his injury still a mystery, 12-year-old Harold Zoslow was unconscious last night at his home, 41 Hamilton street northwest.

He was discovered lying in Rock Creek Church road, with a gash in his forehead, yesterday by Edmund Monk, who took him to his home. His mother suggested that Harold may have stumbled and fallen in the road. Police pointed out that beside the spot was a high wall from which he may have tumbled.

Dog Bites Girl, Dies

A dog bit the hand that fed him, and yesterday he was dead, apparently of natural causes.

The dog snapped at his mistress Friday in the 800 block of Twenty-sixth street northwest. The girl was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Bible Called Bulwark of Democracy

Dr. Powers Speaks at Foundry Church on 'Bible Month' Program

The Holy Bible is one of the greatest bulwarks against encroachment of dictatorships, Dr. Edgar D. Powers, district secretary of the American Bible Society, said yesterday morning at Foundry Methodist Church.

"Bible Month" guest speaker, he declared the Bible is a powerful influence in "seeing that the world is made safe for democracy, and democracy safe for the world, with people's rights maintained, their liberties upheld and social justice practiced."

Dr. Powers was one of a group of American Bible Society leaders occupying pulpits here yesterday. A "statesmen's dinner" is scheduled for tonight at the Mayflower Hotel in connection with "Bible Month."

Moral rearmament is the challenge to live by one's deepest moral and spiritual convictions, the Right Rev. Logan H. Roots, former primate of China, told a large audience at Washington Cathedral.

"Anyone who faces it recognizes, when they are stated in modern terms, the standards of Christ—absolute honesty, purity, unselfishness and love," said the prelate, a leader in the so-called Oxford movement, "and he knows that he must begin with himself and his own failures."

Bishop Roots, who several weeks ago took part in a moral rearmament program here with H. W. "Bunny" Austin and Dr. Frank Buchman, said his last evening in China was spent with Generalissimo and Madame Chiang-kai Shek, and he had found them deeply interested in the subject. He said he found similar interest among some Japanese leaders.

Mgr. Sheen Assails Soviet Symbol, Above Flag at Fair

Elizabeth, N. J., May 21 (AP).—The Right Rev. Mgr. Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University, told a church audience here tonight that "no American should go to the New York World's Fair until the American flag is placed above that of communism."

"The highest thing at the fair is the symbol of communism," Father Sheen said at St. Mary's auditorium, referring to the Soviet pavilion, which is topped by an heroic figure of a Russian worker.

Father Sheen's statement was included in an attack on communism and fasims before the Union County Federation of Holy Name Societies.

2 More D.C. Residents Die In N.C. Crash

Death Toll Raised To 3; Woman and 4 Youths Injured In Auto Mishaps

Two more District residents died yesterday of injuries suffered in an automobile crash Saturday near Washington, N. C., raising the death toll to three.

Willis C. Wolaver, 53, and Mrs. J. S. Rowe, 18, of 2248 Shannon place northwest, succumbed to skull injuries yesterday at Tayloe Hospital, Washington, N. C. Wolaver's wife, Marjorie, 35, an expectant mother, died instantly when their auto overturned on a North Carolina highway Saturday night.

Hospital official's said that Mrs. Rowe's husband, whose skull was fractured, would recover.

The four had been en route to Aurora, N. C., to visit Rowe's father.

Woman Badly Hurt

In Washington last night a woman was critically injured when she became confused in the heavy traffic in the 3000 block Wisconsin avenue northwest and stepped into the path of an auto. At Georgetown Hospital, the victim, Wilma Young, 55, of 1410 M street northwest, was being treated for a skull fracture, brain concussion and injuries to the body.

Four Youths Injured

Four youths were injured last night when their car overturned on the Lee Highway, a mile west of Centerville, Va.

The youths, ranging from 20 to 25 years and residing in Culpeper, Va., were driving to Washington, they told police, when they were sideswiped by a hit-run driver, forcing the car off the road and overturning it.

Loris Clore and Frank Popham, thrown clear of the auto, escaped with minor injuries.

Rina Chiaventoni, Italian Countess, Dies Here at 77

Signora Rina Chiaventoni, Countess di Castellvecchio, died yesterday at her apartment at the Cairo Hotel. She was 77.

Widow of John Chiaventoni, she was a distinguished linguist and, according to friends, had served as a Federal interpreter. For many years she maintained a school of languages in the 1400 block of Twenty-first street northwest.

She is survived by a nephew, Alfred Chiaventoni, of New York City.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

"Juarez" to Be Given Invitational Preview

High Officials to View New Muni Film; 'Union Pacific' Moves to the Metropolitan; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

FROM OTHER CITIES have come eloquent testimonials to the superior merit of the Warner Brothers' production of "Juarez," concerning which something has been said here from time to time ever since the receipt of that bogus letter from John Garfield extolling its virtues.

BELL

At long last, as the royal saying goes, "Juarez" is to be revealed locally soon to distinguished invited groups and, early in June, to the public.

Members of the President's Cabinet, the Senate and House of Representatives will attend a private screening of "Juarez" in the auditorium of the Department of the Interior, this Wednesday evening, May 24, at 8:30 o'clock. The Government officials will be the guests of Warner Brothers Pictures, producers of the film, and Zone Manager John J. Payette, in charge of all Warner interests in this territory. The regular public release engagement of the picture will be celebrated at the Earle Theater the week of June 9, following the presentations of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" and "Only Angels Have Wings."

"Juarez," it may be said without yet having seen the film, marks another notable addition to Paul Muni's growing list of biographical screen studies. Some of them, of course, have brought him the Academy Award for the best acting of the year. Co-starred with him in "Juarez" is Bette Davis, also one of the most habitual of the Academy Award winners. Then, too, there are Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield, Donald Crisp, Joseph Calleia, Gale Sondergaard, Gilbert Roland and Henry O'Neill to lend the cast added brilliance.

As I have remarked in this space on a previous occasion, both Stage Magazine and Life have accorded "Juarez" positions of eminence in their pages. The encomiums extend even beyond that. High officials of the Government, who already have viewed the picture, proclaim it great. Among them are Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and the United States Ambassador to Mexico, the Hon. Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy—or so I am led to believe from authoritative sources.

So on Wednesday night, we shall see what we shall see.

It is not by any means a surety that Paul Muni entertains any vast enthusiasm for this perpetuation of his name in conjunction with what may be denominated a "grooved" type of picture. Mr. Muni is a volatile young man of illimitable versatility, who, I imagine, would enjoy kicking up his heels once in a while in a film play that would permit him to "relax" from the constant demand of recreating some profoundly impressive figure of history. Maybe I am wrong. But with "Pasteur," "Zola" and now "Juarez" on his slate, it seems reasonable to suppose that he would not be averse to a slight change of pace. The public, no doubt, would feel differently about it.

While we are on the topic of the Warners, their pictures and their houses, this would seem to be a fine spot in which to remark that "Union Pacific" takes up its position as chief film attraction at the Metropolitan Theater this morning. Three days seems to have been enough to demonstrate that "You Can't Get Away With Murder."

So much has been written here concerning "Union Pacific" that further elaboration of the film's worth as the greatest of the year's "Westerns" would seem to be just a little out of place. We made the trip in from Baltimore with all the stars on that fabulous "Union Pacific Special," reviewed the picture and chattered incidentally about it to the tune of many words. There would appear to be little that remains to be said.

The fact persists, however, that "Union Pacific" is a work of stupendous proportions. It is packed with action, never deviates from those tenets of faith that have made the cinema an unprecedented medium of entertainment and is peopled by players who were ideally chosen for their appointed tasks—headed by Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Akim Tamiroff, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Anthony Quinn, Stanley Ridges and Lynne Overman.

Having written ourselves out on the subject, there will be no further review of "Union Pacific" in these columns. My only exhortation is that if you have not already seen it, you hustle right down to the Metropolitan and take a look. You will find it pretty long, but it is all so good that that does not matter.

All options held by last season's subscribers to the Theater Guild-American Theater Society of Washington series of six plays theoretically expire today. That is to say that reserved seat locations, under the subscription plan, if not taken up today ordinarily would be thrown on the open market, on a basis of first come, first served. As usual, however, Bess Davis Schreiner, local sales manager, with offices in the National Theater, where all of the plays are presented, has accorded three days of grace to the dilatory. There are already more than 3,000 subscribers for next season entered on the books. Thursday, May 25, is announced as the absolute deadline for those who wish to retain the seats they had last year. It might be time to scurry about a bit.

It was pleasant to receive a complimentary copy of the current issue of Life from Mr. Otis Peabody Swift. It was, as a matter of fact, doubly pleasant. First because of his cordial note; secondly, because the new Life celebrates the fine work of Laurette Taylor in the Broadway revival of Sutton Vane's play of "Outward Bound."

Life pays Miss Taylor high tribute, as she richly deserves. Her work in "Outward Bound" may be said to place the capstone upon a career that has been thickly studded with fine achievements on the stage. No one ever, I think, will forget her performance in "Peg o' My Heart"—just as Life points out.

Washington should be especially interested in this tribute because it will be remembered—I hope—that "Outward Bound" was the play that inaugurated the President's birthday celebrations this year at a single "command performance" in the National Theater on a Sunday night—January 29. The house was sold out, with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt occupying the Presidential box.

It was Laurette Taylor who made the graceful curtain speech to the President at the fall of the final curtain.

So Master Harry Hunter, former Washington branch exchange manager for Paramount, subsequently transferred to the managership of Paramount interests in Australia, finally has put in his appearance in Washington on that vacation junket of his from the Antipodes. Mr. Hunter, after hiding out at his home in the Puget Sound country for weeks on end, and then sneaking unostentatiously into New York, arrived at the Shoreham on last Thursday night. He is being attended by Joseph P. Morgan, as gentleman-in-waiting.

Today at 1:30 the drama desks will be privileged to cast their critical eyes over the footages of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," one of the most sensational pictures, according to all report, to come out of Burbank in many months. Edward G. Robinson is starred, with a fine cast in support. More of this later.

Whatever-You-Were-Doing Note

BARBARA STANWYCK AND ROBERT PRESTON
as they appear in the roles of Mollie Monahan, heroine, and Dick Allen, one of the chief renegades, in Cecil B. De Mille's imposing production of "Union Pacific." Having already enjoyed a prosperous week at the Earle, this subject begins a repeat downtown engagement on the screen of the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater this morning. Joel McCrea is costarred in the film with Miss Stanwyck

New York, May 21.

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT: The social set at Louisville, Ky., doesn't expect to see you back in a long time—because at the swanky Southern dinner there when you were asked to name the greatest man living you replied: "Paul Robeson" . . . Charles Chaplin: Paulette Goddard wants to come East this summer, to Great Neck, and appear in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" . . . Broadway Association: Some years ago the Earl Carroll Theater was transformed into a theater-restaurant and now is known as the Casa Manana. Billy Rose's show at the place closes Saturday night. This week Earl Carroll started negotiations to try and get it back . . . L. B. Mayer: Your studio refuses to show the movie script of "It Can't Happen Here" to Sidney Howard—who wrote it.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN: Stewart Cloete, the British writer and author of "The Turning Wheel," is here now—and will become a resident alien . . . Mayor LaGuardia: Prince Ibrahim, who has vacationed in New York for the last ten years, returned to Paris after a three-week visit. He quit the town because he insists it's a dull place now and the fair ruined it . . . Equity: "Mexicana," the show sponsored by the Mexican government, will close. President Cardenas has ordered the scenery, etc., shipped back to Mexico for lack of business. Cardenas says that 300,000 pesetas is enough of an investment to lose.

ASCAP: Irving Berlin returned to New York for his birthday . . . Mary Ellin, his 12-year-old daughter, presented Berlin with a birthday gift—a song she wrote in his honor . . . The child also wrote the piano part. Berlin confessed: "That's more than I can do."

COMMISSIONER OF INVESTIGATION HERLANDS: You should hear what your former boss, Tom Dewey, called you yesterday, in connection with your search for the German-American Bund books—which Dewey's office grabbed a long time ago . . . Roark Bradford: The script of your new play, "John Henry," now is being read by Paul Robeson. If he likes it he'll appear in the title role . . . Clara Boothe: The feminine stars who are appearing in the movie adaptation of your play, "The Women," are snapping at each other more bitterly than do the characters you originated in your show.

BONWIT TELLER: Salvator Dali, the surrealist artist who jumped through your window, has his paintings exhibited at the Julien Levy Galleries . . . Levy, guiding some patrons through the room, tried to answer their questions about the meaninng of Dali's surrealism—and his explanation even confused himself. Levy went to Dali for aid . . . "Don't try ot explain my paintings so that people will understand them," Dali cautioned. "Explain it so that they won't understand 'em."

ADOLF HITLER: Charlie Chaplin now is deciding between Fannie Brice and Beatrice Lillie—the two best comediennes in show business and who are best friends—for a role in his next movie, "The Dictator" . . . J. Edgar Hoover: The Securities and Exchange Commission is investigating 120 "front money" concerns who advertise that they will furnish capital for small firms. Former Assistant District Attorney Phil Wagner has been summoned to Washington to head the investigation . . . Ambassador Oumansky: At the opening of your elegant Soviet Pavilion at the fair, Philip Thurston, secretary of the City Planning Commission, gasped: "My God! I hope this doesn't give Bob Moses more ideas!"

MAYOR ROSSI: The Hollywood report is that Charles Butterworth, the screen actor, went to your Frisco Fair and saw a crowd inside Sally Rand's Nude Ranch watching four completely nude girls playing badminton . . . Butterworth joined the crowd and watched for two minutes. Then he turned to a man standing beside him and asked "What's the score?"

KING GEORGE VI: Your visit set Sinclair Lewis to thinking of what would happen if America became a royalist country and bestowed titles upon its distinguished subjects. "I've selected my title already," said Lewis, referring to his native town. "I'll be Lord Sauk-Center" . . . Elsa Maxwell: Mrs. William M. Clark, of the Social Register, has composed and copyrighted a number of popular songs. Mrs. Clark, wife of the banker, sings them only to her family . . . Cooper Union: Ann Cooper Hewitt, the heiress, whose mohter, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, died a few weeks ago, was reported by the press to have departed for Reno. Ann flew back to New York secretly this week and has given up her name. She now calls herself "Brugiere," the name of her half-brother.

Nazi Villain Triumphs Over Hoodoo Past

Martin Kosleck Finds Place in Films After Weird Painting

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, May 21.—The Warner Brothers began filming their second anti-Nazi movie today, while all their competitors were just climing on the "Down-With-Hitler" bandwagon.

Virtually every studio in town has one or more pictures, insulting to the Nazis, on the fire, with a total of some two dozen scripts on the subject at the Hays office, for approval. The Warners, who got the jump on the rest of the boys with their "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," put before the cameras in the meantime, their picture "Career Man."

This one is based on the premise that Hitler maintains in Washington a corps of "newspaper reporters" whose duty it is to ferret out information from the State Department and send it to their government. Because of American free speech, they operate with impunity, until Joe McCrea, the Undersecretary of State, goes after the Nazi chieftain in Washington with his fists.

The picture returns to the screen, in any event, the unknown and excellent actor who portrayed Herr Hitler's Herr Goebbels in "Confessions." The program listed him as Nicolai Yashkin. There wasn't any such person.

Has Had Odd Career

Warner's Goebbels turned out to be Martin Kosleck, who's had one of those careers you read about.

Six years ago, in any event, he was an actor on the stage in Berlin, witi a burning desire to come to Hollywood. He came in 1933, landed broke, unable to speak English, and without a job. His only friend in town was Marlene Dietrich. She saw that he didn't starve.

Kosleck studied English, but he felt so depressed and so strange in the new country that he took to making pencil sketches to get his mind off his troubles. He never had studied art, but his pictures appealed to Miss Dietrich. She asked him to paint her portrait. It was a beauty. She pread the news around that a great artist was in Hollywood.

"And it wasn't long before I got an offer from Fox Studios to paint some elaborate murals," Kosleck recalled. "I never had done anything like that and I was scared. But I did my best and they complimented me on my work.

"So that was a good start. I kept on painting all kinds of pictures and selling them. I got $300 each for them."

He gave up acting altogether and stuck to painting. He brought his mother over from Germany and last fall he had a one-man exhibition of his paintings in a fashionable New York gallery.

"I didn't do so well," he said, "until Albert Einstein came to see it and gave out an interview complimenting me far beyond my worth as an artist. But that started the ball rolling and it was the thing to do in New York to see my exhibition. I sold a lot of paintings, too."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 21 (INS).—Frank Craven will be back in Hollywood in less than a month to report to Paramount for the co-starring role with Fay Bainter in "Our Neighbors, the Carters." The star, who was just here in his stage hit "Our Town," signed the contract in San Francisco right after closing performance of the present tour. Craven, who has had a world of experience in pictures, hasn't made a movie since "Penrod and His Twin Brother"—but since his success in the Thornton Wilder play he's Hollywood bait again.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Para is setting great score by this folsky, homey production in the fond hope it will be a one-shot as popular as the whole "Judge Hardy" series. Many of the talented little kids Charles Rogers tested for Bing Crosby's "Star Maker" will be given important roles—and something tells me if it goes over as they expect, "Our Neighbors, the Carters" will be serialized.

Young Tim Holt, 21-year-old son of Jack, gets his biggest boots so far as one of Ginger Rogers' two beaux in "My Fifth Avenue Girl." Gregory La Cava, who will produce the opus, thought Tim cut quite a figure for himself as the dashing leader of the cavalry in "Stagecoach" and decided to give the kid a real chance. For a while it looked as if Tim might follow in his father's footsteps, saving the gal in "Westerns" but this city slicker role may turn the tide toward more sophisticated parts. Walter Connolly and Veree Teasdale will play his parents and the cast also includes Ferike Boros, Lou Calhern, Kathryn Hahn and Manda Lane.

Tyrone Power and Annabella are going to get that six weeks' honeymoon after all, right after he finishes "The Rains Came." Then, after a Honolulu-Australia jaunt, Ty is to go into "Johnny Apollo," which deals with the problems of today's disillusioned youth. Hear the studio has had a change of heart about casting Ty as any more bad boys like "Jesse James" and the weakling in "Rose of Washington Square." So far there's no femme set, but Twentieth Century-Fox is very high on both Linda Darnell, now in "Hotel for Women" and Brenda Joyce (Fern in "The Rains Came") and one of them will probably be boosted along toward stardom as Ty's leading lady.

Ardis Gaines, Warners answer to Hedy LaMarr, not only gets a new name—Brenda Marshall—but also An Sheridan's role in "Career Man." Evidently, this 24-year-old brunette has something, for this is a very good "oomph" role with Joel McCrea. Interesting that both Miss Gaines (I mean Miss Marshall) and Ann Sheridan used to attend the same school in San Antonio, Tex. The reason Ann is out of "Career Man" is that she's tied up on "20,000 Years in Sing Sing."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Nancy Kelly's big moment, Edmund O'Brien, expected to join her this week, has been delayed because of the illness of his sister; Dorothy Lamour and John Howard looking dreamy-eyed dancing to Artie Shaw's music: Simone Simon's deal for a musical show with the Shuberts fell through—but she wants to come back here anyway. Any offers? . . . Roy Del Ruth getting a horse laugh out of the wild rumor his 17-year-old son eloped with a 26-year-old widow. The boy's still a student at Black Foxe Military School; Virgin Bruce is an aunty. Her brother, Stanley Briggs and his missus have a brand new boy titled Vincent Lawrence Briggs: Dixie Lee Crosby baby-showered Mrs. Herb Polesie at a surprise party Saturday night.

Jimmy Cagney's got a "for sale" sign on his yacht, the Martha; Virginia Van Upp recuperating rapidly from her nervous breakdown; Mrs. Gary Cooper was the "champ" at the bowling party including Fred and Lillian MacMurray and Tyrone Power and the bride last night;

Collier, Happily, Has No Worries

Lest the rumor circulated today be too widespread, let it be distinctly understood that William Collier, sr., is not an extra. He's still doing character roles, and doing all right for himself, thank you.

The rumor started during the filming of a fight scene for "Invitation to Happiness." More than 1,000 extras occupied seats while Fred MacMurray and Eddie Hogan slammed each other.

In the crowd, with no lines to speak, Collier was the object of considerable attention from the extras. They thought he was one of them, working on a $5.50 or an $11.00 check.

The rumors eventually got to Collier, who amused rather than indignant, merely points out that he plays MacMurray's father-in-law in the film.

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 21.—When I predicted last week that Metro would have a scoop for the opening of "Mr. Chips" by having all the newlyweds present, Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor made the prediction come true by choosing Mother's Day to say their "I do's."

HOPPER

Barbara looked so lovely in gray-blue crepe and blue fox coat. And the ordeal of being surrounded by 50 photographers snapping hundreds of pictures against a nude mural which nobody noticed, I thought rather barbaric and mentioned it.

But Bob said: "We owe our present position to the kindness of the press, and this is little enough we can do to repay them." Just then a reporter from a lurid New York paper said: "My editor wired me to ask some embarrassing questions. But you're two of the nicest kids I've ever met, and I just can't do it."

Barbara gave Bob a thoroughbred mare for a wedding present. She said: "Union Pacific gave me a honeymoon when they took me to Omaha in President Jeffer's private car—but without a bridegroom. And served for my first meal pickled goldfish as an hors d'oeuvre."

Her adopted son, Dion, will not take Bob's name and always calls him "Gentleman Bob." Bob calls Barbara "Bobbie."

Leon Torreau's arrival in England will be as exciting as though we'd sent over an Indian. They don't have G-men in Britain. But Scotland Yard continues to do a mighty fine job.

Warner's is delighted about the suit brought by Band Leader Fritz Kuhn against the "Nazi Spy." It's already helped the picture.

Billie Burke isn't entirely reconciled to Patricia's coming marriage on June 22 to Bill Stevenson, dance instructor.

"It's such a peculiar profession," says Billie. "And he hasn't any money. Of course, Mr. Ziegfeld only had $200 when we were wed. But then, we always expect our daughters to marry millionaires."

Stanley Anderson phoned and asked if I'd deny the item not in my column that it was his son who was marrying Gloria Swanson's daughter. The Bob Anderson Gloria is marrying is the son of Harold.

The latest Goldwyism is a honey! Sam was talking to intimate friends gathered here for the United Artist convention: "Do they show you boys the thousands of dollars worth of sets we have on the lot? Do they show you any million-dollar pictures we're making? No! They show you Pickfair. Gentlemen, when, may I ask, are we releasing Pickfair?"

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

An out-moded safety valve applied to American emotions by a United States Congress 29 years ago following a summer of race hysteria is about to be scrapped. Hearings are scheduled for Friday before a Senate sub-committee on Senator Warren Barbour's bill to repeal the law prohibiting the transportation of prize-fight films.

POVICH

With the haste of a war measure the old law was rushed through Congress in 1910, hard on the heels of the Jim Jeffries-Jack Johnson fight at Reno on July 4. The country was seething with race riots. Nearly 20 persons were killed, hundreds injured in the clashes that spawned from a white heavyweight champion's defeat by a black man.

There was trouble particularly in the localities where movies of the fight were shown. The Federal Government could not control the taking of prize-fight pictures, but it could forbid their transportation across State lines. That it did with the law passed by Congress. The old law has become as much of a mockery as was prohibition. It has neither been respected nor enforced.

State, county and city officials for several years have been winking at the Federal statute. Pictures of every big fight of recent years have been exhibited even in States where fighting has never been legalized. Perhaps it was because enforcement was difficult. Remember, it has never been a crime to exhibit the films. Only the transportation of them was without the law. And prosecutors knew they could not gain a conviction of an exhibitor for the mere showing of the films. He could always say "I found the films in the lobby and decided to run them."

Did You Ever Hear of a Conviction?

Forty-eight hours after the big title fights of the past few years, the films have been shown in States from coast to coast. Have you ever heard of a conviction for transporting 'em? For some reason, perhaps because the movie people did not wish to challenge Federal authority in its own lair, the District of Columbia has never showed the films. But in Mount Rainier, in Bethesda and Rockville they rarely miss.

And there is a paradox, too. Because despite the absence of the films from Washington, Maj. Ernest E. Brown, superintendent of police, has been recommending in his annual reports for the past six years that Congress lift the ban on fight films. At the committee hearing at the Capitol on Friday he will personally urge that Senator Barbour's bill be enacted and the law rescinded.

Senator Barbour is acting in complete sincerity in his efforts to repeal the old law. It happens that he is the most important fistic figure ever to hold a Senate seat. He confesses to being a fight fan, but he is more than that. He is the former national amateur heavyweight champion of the United States and was, perhaps, the original "white hope."

Senator Barbour was a strapping young man from a rich New Jersey household back in 1910, when Jack Johnson ended Nordic supremacy in the prize ring temporarily by knocking out Jeffries. In the clamor for the restoration of the heavyweight title to the white race, young Barbour was elevated to the rank of No. 1 White Hope. He had been a stand-out in amateur ranks, he was a 200-pounder and he wanted to fight professionally.

Trained for Fight With Johnson

He had been on tour with Jeffries and Frank Gotch and an old California heavyweight named Sam Berger before the Johnson fight and was serious about a prize-fight career. When Jeffries was licked, young Barbour actually went into training for a Johnson fight. His parents were frantic. Wealthy tycoons of the cotton and silk thread industry, they finally bought their son off with a yachting trip around the world.

Senator Barbour, like most other sensible folks, now believes that the old law has outlived its usefulness. He has seen colored fighters like Joe Louis and Henry Armstrong come along and win world championships from white men and occasion little if any resentment. He is proud of his own interest in boxing. At Toledo in 1919, the official timekeeper for the Willard-Dempsey battle was the man who later was to be elected Senator from New Jersey.

Lifting the ban against transporting fight films, Senator Barbour believes, would best serve to recognize the stupidity of an unpopular and unenforced law. Agreeing with him is Maj. Harvey L. Miller, coach of the Maryland University boxing team, who has frequently used films of Joe Louis in his big fights to illustrate proper boxing technique.

"The first Louis-Schmeling fight pictures," said Miller, "were ideal for the purposes of a college coach. They showed two clever boxers, two hard hitters in a bout in which there was virtually no infighting nor clinching. My Maryland team learned more from those pictures than any coach could attempt to tell them."

Flanking Maj. Brown in his support of Senator Barbour's bill on Friday will be Charles P. Reynolds, president of the N. B. A.; Ed Foster, secretary of the organization; Abe J. Green, New Jersey boxing commissioner, and Fred J. Saddy, secretary of the Wisconsin commission. Jack Dempsey may also put in an appearance.

But the man who ought to be there giving all the backing he can muster should be Mr. Mike Jacobs. Promoter Jacobs talks gaily of television, of the million-dollar profits televised fights will bring to promoters in the near future. But with the old law still on the books, and televised fights apt to be construed as nothing more than fight films, Mr. Jacobs' profits may vanish into the same thin air that makes television possible.

Case's Error Keeps Krakauskas From Defeating Ted Lyons In Stadium Battle

By Shirley Povich.

Ancient Ted Lyons, who was pitching big league baseball when Joe Krakauskas was chiefly interested in making an all-day lollipop last all day, out-performed the Washington left-hander over a 10-inning route yesterday. Krakauskas was beaten, 3 to 2, by Lyons, the White Sox and George Washington Case.

It was his colleague, Case, who finally doomed Krakauskas, as if the Nats weren't suffering enough pain with the 38-year-old Lyons out there pitching seven-hit ball. The run the White Sox scored in the tenth inning to break a 2-2 tie was the gift of young Mr. Case who sabotaged the works.

Krakauskas was no composite of Johnson, Mathewson and Three-Fingered Brown on the pitching mound yesterday, but he was rocking along well enough, holding the White Sox to a pair of runs until Mike Kreevich had the good luck to hit a single to Case in center field. By the time the rookie center fielder had finished playing patty-cake with the ball, the winning run was nicely on its way home from first base.

That winning run was inspired by Krakauskas himself, however. With the sixth of the seven walks he issued, Krakky put Luke Appling on base at the start of the tenth. The tension was eased for the 13,000 customers when Case made a leaping catch of Radcliff's line drive and then it was that Kreevich singled to center.

What started out as a routine single produced a shock among the 13,000 for Case first juggled the ball, then dropped it entirely, failed to grab it up immediately, and

Dizzy Hurls Shutout, Wins For Cubs, 4-0

Dean, in First Start, Allows Bees 3 Hits As 20,000 Cheer His Return to Old Form

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 21.—While 21,684 fans who had stood for an hour in the rain thundered a welcome to him, Dizzy Dean made his first 1939 league start this afternoon and pitched a three-hit game to give the Cubs a 4-to-0 victory over the Boston Bees.

DIZZY DEAN

There was no question about Dean's readiness to take his place among the Cubs' starting pitchers. His performance was reminiscent of so many he turned in during his heyday with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Bees made one scratch hit in the first inning and two more in the seventh. Only one Bee reached third base and only four reached first, one of them as a result of an error by Steve Mesner in the sixth inning. Dean didn't walk a batter and from the first through the fifth he retired 13 Bees in succession.

When the game was over he declared his arm was as strong as it had been at the start.

Cubs Chase Turner

Jim Turner started for the Bees and held the Cubs in check until the sixth when they drove him from the box with a three-run, three-hit attack. Stanley Hack walked to open the assault, Bill Herman sacrificed and Augie Galan, Hank Leiber and Joe Marty followed with doubles to send Turner to the showers.

John Lanning then took over and put an end to the uprising, but remained to see the Cubs count their fourth run in the seventh. Dean himself started this one off with a single, Hack sacrificed and was safe when Lanning fumbled the ball. Herman then sacrificed and the bases were filled when Galan drew a pass. Lanning then uncorked a wild pitch and Dean crossed the plate with the last Cub run.

Bees Never Come Close

The Bees never came close to scoring. Their best effort came in the seventh when, with one out, Buddy Hassett singled to center and moved to second on Al Simmons' infield out. Mesner made a great stop of Ralph Hodgin's grounder back of second, but could not recover the ball in time to throw out the runner. Hassett, however, overran third and was thrown out, Herman to Hack. Dean then retired the Bees in order in the eighth and ninth innings.

Dean had previously appeared on the mound twice since the season began.

Six days ago he turned in a masterful relief job, letting Brooklyn down with three hits and no runs in five innings while striking out five batters. On May 1 he started the Monty Stratton benefit game against the White Sox but was batted out of the box.

Old Tiger Nemesis Ends Bridges' Streak, Hits Mighty Homer

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 21.—Lefty Grove, ancient nemesis of the Detroit Tigers, pitched the Boston Red Sox to an 8 to 3 triumph over the Bengals today before 24,000 spectators, ending Tommy Bridges' five-game winning streak.

It was not his nine-hit pitching performance, however, that gave the 39-year-old southpaw the most satisfaction. Coming up first against Relief Pitcher Alton Benton in the seventh, Grove—who didn't make a single extra-base hit during all of last season—hit a home run high into the leftfield screen on the first ball Benton pitched.

The veteran also received able batting support from the three Red Sox youngsters—Jim Tabor, Bobby Doerr and Ted Williams—each of whom made two hits to drive in a total of six runs. The Red Sox didn't waste a single scoring opportunity against Bridges.

A run resulted each of the three times Bridges passed a man, the Sox scoring a total of five tallies on five hits and the passes.

Retain Scant Lead Over Cincinnati In Pennant Race

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 21.—The St. Louis Cardinals bunched five of their nine hits off Hugh Mulcahy in the first inning today and on the strength of a three-run attack that resulted defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 5 to 2, to retain their scant league lead over Cincinnati.

The early bombardment included three doubles, two singles and one of the seven passes dished out by Mulcahy. He had five strikeouts, however.

Bob Bowman, racking up his second win of the year, also allowed nine hits—three of them by Mul-

Snead Shoots 66, Six Under Par, to Lead Quartet at Congressional; Guldahl Has 69; Foursome Accounts for 21 Birdies

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The greatest two-man team in golf today, Open Titlist Ralph Guldahl and Sammy Snead, the uncrowned champ, treated some 2,500 scrambling spectators to a sub-par slugfest yesterday at Congressional as they defeated host pro Wiffy Coxx and tousle-haired Jimmy Thomson 2 and 1.

Holing every putt, Snead was easily the best man of the foursome, dropping seven birdies and missing par only on the ninth for a 66, six under perfect figures. It ran his sub-par total to 11 for the first two times he has played the course.

The foursome accounted for 21 birdies over the route, with Guldahl next with a 69, three under, while Thomson was one under with a 71 and Cox matched the card with a par 72.

The losers won only one hole, the sixth where Thomson dropped a 15 foot birdie putt after the others were down in par fours. Guldahl won the second with a great birdie three, dropping a 30-footer, the winners halved the third in par threes and won the hole, while Snead accounted for eleventh where he holed an uphill putt of 25 feet for the two up lead.

No Driving Contest

The driving contest was omitted from the card, but over the 18 holes the edge went to Snead, who was in the fairway more than Thomson, and when they both belted them out in the middle, Snead held his own.

Longest hit of the day was on the first where Snead split the middle of the fairway some 350 yards away, while Thomson was as far but in the rough. Snead drove within 10 yards of the green on the 368-yard fourth, and well over the hill on the 401-yard eleventh, with only a chip shot to the green.

Thomson's tee shot on the fifth, had it not hit a spectator, would undoubtedly have gone in and possibly over the dit, while he was not more than 50 yards off the sixteenth green, 370-yard uphill.

While the others were all par or better, Snead stole the gallery and most of the plaudits with the easy manner in which he scored the 66. An erring tee shot on the ninth was his only slip from par, while on the first, fourth, fifth, eighth, eleventh, thirteenth and eighteenth he holed birdie putts.

Twice his bid for eagles hit the pin, on the first and fourth holes. He played the course without a five on his card, scoring easy birds on par fives.

Ralph Out in 33

Guldahl, playing his fifth straight exhibition, and twenty-first match in 23 days, was out in 33, four under par, but he missed par on three holes on the back nine, where his chip shots rolled past the hole and he

Snead Heads Field Seeking Open Berths

47 Mid-Atlantic Pros And Amateurs Shot For Seven Berths

Seven berths to the national open championship await a field of 47 Middle Atlantic pros and amateurs, and Sammy Snead, who will play 36 holes over the Congressional course today with any scores of 147 or better expected to gain the coveted places.

The overwhelming choice to lead the field, naturally, is Snead, the perfect swinger from White Sulphur Springs, who had 67 in a trial round over the course Saturday, 66 in the match yesterday, and now that he's getting down to business, is liable to be 65-64, and that is by no means impossible.

The field will start at 9 p. m. with Jack Harris, unattached pro, and Buck Worsham, Chevy Chase assistant, the first one off the tee. Snead, playing in this section because the match yesterday made it impossible for him to get back to his home district, Huntington, W. Va., in time for the tests today, is paired with Al Houghton.

Ralph Guldahl, asking about the class of players in the tests, said a score of 146 may be too high, as the course is not playing difficult.

Aside from Snead, Wiffy Cox and Leo Walper are the top choices among the local pros, while Andy Gibson and Ralph Beach lead the Baltimore delegation. Bobby Brownell, here from Duke University, is the most likely qualifier among the amateurs. But Coffey leads a small Virginia entry.

Fred McLeod, 1908, Open champion, will have the sentimental support of the entire field to gain one of the seven places, and is capable of doing so.

Babe Stapp Wins A Starting Berth In 500-Mile Race

Indianapolis, Ind., May 21 (INS).—Babe Stapp, of Los Angeles, today became the sixteenth driver to qualify for the annual Memorial Day 500-mile race when he completed the four-lap test run at an average speed of 125 miles an hour.

Stapp was driving an 8-cylinder Alfa-Romeo. His best lap was 126.387 miles an hour.

Archibald Shuns D. C. Title Bout

New York, May 21 (AP).—Al Weill, manager of featherweight champion Joey Archibald, said today he had turned down an offer by Matchmaker Goldie Ahern, of Washington, for an Archibald-Joe Silva championship fight in the capital.

The fight was proposed for the early part of June at Griffith Stadium, but Weill wired the Washington promoter that "I have much better offers on hand."

Yanks Rally to Beat Tribe, 12-6, For Eleventh Straight Triumph

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 21.—The slugging for which the New York Yankees are famous stood them in good stead today as they outblasted the Cleveland Indians, 12 to 6, for their eleventh consecutive American League victory.

The Tribe took the lead at the start with three runs in the first inning and drove Lefty Gomez from the mound in the seventh with another three-run flurry which knotted the score. But the champions proved themselves capable of coming from behind for the second straight day and put together six runs in their last two turns at bat.

Everyone of the Yanks except relief pitcher Bump Hadley, who got credit for the game, hit safely during the melee and Bill Dickey and Frank Crosetti each had homers.

Al Milnar, the southpaw who beat the Yankees in 11 innings two weeks ago at Cleveland, started for the Indians and was slammed for six runs in the first four innings, including Dickey's circuit blow with one on in the fourth.

He then gave way to John Humphries, who stopped the Bronx Bombers for the only two innings they were held scoreless, but a pair of passes, a sacrifice and a single put New York ahead again in the

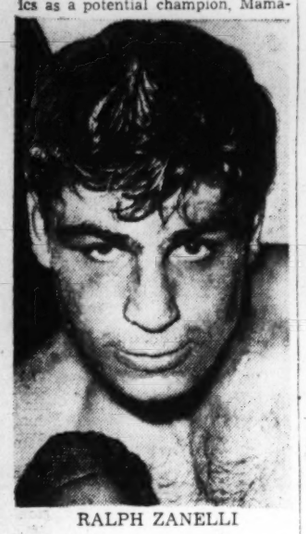
Mamakos 7-5 Favorite Over Zanelli in First Outdoor Show

D.C. Welter Is Bidding High Rating

40 Rounds on Card At Griffith Stadium; Mamakos Promised N. Y. Bout for Win

Boxing makes its 1939 outdoors debut tonight at Griffith Stadium, and it will be Steve Mamakos, Washington's Golden Greek, against Ripper Ralph Zanelli, Providence, R. I., Italian in the 10-round feature match.

Regarded by veteran boxing critics as a potential champion, Mamakos will be trading punches with perhaps the best welterweight in New England. A victory for the 21-year-old District fighter would go a long way toward stamping him as a real challenger for the crown now adorning the dusk brow of Henry Armstrong.



RALPH ZANELLI

The Greek has a double purpose in getting over the hurdle that is Zanelli.

No. 2 Spot at Stake

At stake tonight is the No. 2 position on the National Boxing Association welterweight ladder. Mamakos is ranked sixth by the N. B. A., and the ratings committee, of which Col. Heinie Miller, District Boxing Commission chairman is secretary, has virtually promised the winner that No. 2 post.

Should Mamakos win he would come close to forcing Armstrong into a championship bout. Never before has Washington had a fighter who ranked as high as Mamakos, and the way the Greek boy has been knocking off his opponents—it would not be surprising to see him battle his way to the No. 1 challenger's seat.

Mamakos has won 21 out of 23 professional bouts, and in his last few matches has shown flashes of knockout brilliancy. He has been installed a 7-to-5 favorite.

Mamakos knocked out Lambertine Williams in Baltimore, decisioned tough Andre Jessurun, and stopped Mickey Makar in the same city. And in Washington before the largest crowd of the indoor season, The Greek let fly some terrific punches in decisioning Vince Pimpinelli.

His Toughest Foe

Mamakos, however, runs into the toughest opponent he ever has faced, in the opinion of Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn and other wise men of the square circle. Zanelli, though a new name hereabouts, is a standout fighter in New England.

The Turner headquarters at the Arena, Fourteenth and W streets northwest, report a large advance sale, and prospects are bright for a crowd of between 3,000 and 5,000 attending the opening show.

Forty rounds are on the card. Sammy Chivas, a Greek welterweight from Detroit, makes his bow against Frankie Wills, local card. Harry Raskin handles Chivas. It will be an eight-round semi-windup. El Brookman, Washington, meets Hunter Crostic, Richmond, in a six; Buddy Thomas, Washington, faces Art Lind, Texas, in a six, and Red Osborne, Baltimore, opposes Joe Test, Wheeling, W. Va., in a four. First bout is at 8:30.

Bill Bennings

At the Post

Charles Town, W. Va., May 21.

Dear Al:

They call him "Dynamite." His right name is Herbert Kerr. He is a member of that army of race-trackers known simply as "horsemen." When I first heard of "Dynamite" I pictured in my mind a big brute of a man, one of those fellows who beats horses with chains or stuffs spunges up their noses. But since I have come to know "Dynamite" and I have found that his nickname is about as appropriate as "Ground Hog" would be for Col. Lindbergh. Tell the truth, Herbert Kerr probably treats his horses as good if not better than any man on the race tracks. A friend of his told me that he has had only one horse placed on the schooling list in 20 years. That is, only one horse in all that time has acted up so badly at the post that the starter has banned him until he brushed up on his gate manners. Kerr believes in controlling his horses by kindness. If they don't respond, he doesn't keep them in his stable. The mare Dizzy Dame, winner of Saturday's feature here, is Kerr's pet. She began the season racing in $2,500 company. Kerr stepped her up and she kept on winning. Over at Pimlico, she beat Rissa and others of the upper-bracket sprinters. At this track, she has won both her races. After Dizzy Dame won her first race here, Kerr went over to see her at the barn on the way to his hotel. She was pawing at the floor. Kerr went over to Charles Town and returned with four door mats, those thick hemp ones with "welcome" on them. He placed these under Dizzy Dame's hoofs. Kidded about this, he said, "Yes, I got those door mats for Dizzy. Why I just hated to think of her running those good races for me and then standing on that hard floor while I was sleeping on a soft mattress." When Dizzy Dame won over Royal Teddy, Ocean Roll and the others, the man known as "Dynamite" was waiting for Jockey Mannie Berg to bring her back to the winner's circle. When the victorious mare was pulled up, Kerr gave her a big kiss right on the end of her nose. The public hears much of doping, stimulating and other cruel methods, but little is written about kindness to horses. This reminds me of a trainer who had a horse for a group of men who wanted to make a "killing." The gang sent him dope to put on the horse's tongue. The kind trainer substituted face powder and the sharpsters saw him and believed the horse was doped. They went out and bet. The horse won.

BILL.

First race—Osofree has had some education and seems to fit nicely in this field of maiden juveniles. Looks like the spot for graduation. Nob's Brother has shown speed and should be close up. He will take it all if it is the wrong day for the top fellow. Vivian K. is a good-looking youngster.

Second race—Good Gracious exhibited plenty of early foot in a recent race and may be the right one in this rather open sprint. Blue Prelude is fast and will be particularly formidable if the track is off. I Do ran out in that recent appearance. If held on the course, this one will be a keen factor.

Third race—Rough Buddy lost a tough one here last week. He has plenty of speed and should handle these. Miss Bones lacks some of the class of the others but appears fit and ready. Bally Bay is dropping down and promises to be a threat.

Fourth race—Worthowning turned in a fine effort last week and should improve off that effort. I look for a winning performance. Irish Vote is far down the reserve list and probably would gallop again if in action. Quick Action did not fancy the slippery going last out.

Fifth race—I'm going to shoot for a price in this test. Vendor's Lien showed fair form over on the milers but that recent outing here was nothing. I'm going to try to be on hand for the awakening. Miss Epe scored in good fashion last week. Spotless, another recent winner, should get part of the pay.

Sixth race—Royal Business was carried wide last out and can improve a lot over that performance. I would prefer a trifle less weight but this mare is in top form. Mon Doit couldn't do it here last week and may be going off form. Clever Girl has won two and changes hands for this.

Seventh race—Dark May galloped along in front of her company in her first outing here. I'm going right back. Best Policy is as fit as that last victory. Jinneal closed gamely in first try over this oval and could improve.

Eighth race—Bav didn't have any the best of the racing luck when beaten last week. Steps up a trifle but has shown me enough to warrant a top pick. Justa Pilgrim and Top Shell to take care of the others.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Jimmy D., Shorts and Scold.

Pirates Chase Carl Hubbell; Beat Giants, 4-1

Klinger Records Fifth Victory in Sixth Games With New York

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 21.—King Carl Hubbell got his first setback of the season today when the Pittsburgh Pirates drove him from the mound in the third inning and went on to win over the Giants, 4-1.

Pirate Pitcher Bob Klinger, who recorded his fifth victory in six tilts with the New Yorkers, opened the third inning with a single but was forced out at second. Arkie Vaughan doubled, scoring Paul Waner, who had forced Klinger, and Johnny Rizzo was walked intentionally. Fern Bell singled to score Vaughan and Rizzo went home when Mel Ott threw wide to the plate.

Bush Captures 20-Foot Sailing Honors in Potomac Series

Comet Class Is Won By William White

Spring Boating Series Ends in Glorious Fashion; Dr. Albert Pagan Is Beaten Out In 20-Foot Races; Paul Walter Wins

By Bob Knight.

Washington skippers wound up the spring sailing association series yesterday afternoon in a glorious grand finale staged beneath a searing sun and a wind changeable as the map of central Europe.

Despite the efforts of the elements, two of the classes put in their best performances of the season, ending with story-book finishes. H. C. Bush, the nautical pride of Alexandria, sailed off with the 20-foot restricted trophy when he slammed across the finish aboard the Cricket II in second place behind Dr. Albert E. Pagan's Kan Doo. Dr. Pagan won handily by nearly 12 minutes, but a series lead built up by Bush in earlier races gave him the spring cup.

Cricket II flashed home less than a length in front of Judge Prentice E. Edrington in the dainty Lady Avon. Bush's victory over the sea-going jurist was the deciding factor of the series. Had Bush crossed the finish in third place, the cup would have been Dr. Pagan's property by the slight margin of one-tenth of a point.

William White Wins

As it was in the 20-foot restricted division, the winner of second place in the Comet class won the series cup. He was William White, helmsman of the trim Frolic. White, along with two others, slipped home less than a minute in the frothy wake of the class winner, Les Wright.

Wright, a pre-series favorite and last year's Chesapeake Bay Snipe champion, took second place in the spring series by nosing out Charlie Dodge's Nandua by less than a foot.

By the time the Snipe class was skipping across the finish, it was old stuff for sailing association officials to chalk up yesterday's second-place winner as the recipient of the series cup. W. W. Valentine won yesterday's race for the class, but relinquished the cup to Reid A. Dunn's Rebel. Dr. Evart Warren clinched runner-up laurels for the series when he piloted High Lama across in third place, slightly more than three minutes behind the Rebel.

Walter Takes Class A

Paul Walter, in the newly fledged Vayu, took the Class A Handicap when he skittered to victory by a fraction of a minute in front of the Sea Scout's Wildcat on a basis of corrected time. The series winner was Charlie Murphy's Eight Ball. Murphy was behind the Eight Ball in a big way yesterday, crossing in sixth position. He had piled up enough points in previous races, however.

In Class B handicap, Charles Trammell's Arbacia, a gem of consistency, took yesterday's race and the series trophy. Arbacia, one of the fast international 14-foot dinghies, showed her stern to the Swan, with Louise Kline at the tiller. Ralph Barnhard in the Black Cat came in third, a shade less than four minutes behind Trammell.

Dick Shaw, with his wife as crew, drove Mrs. Cripps to victory in the Class C Handicap on corrected time. He was followed across the finish by Bill Preston in Jezebel by a tantalizing four-second margin. Jezebel's past record this spring gave her enough points to capture the trophy.

On his return to Capitol Yacht Club, Les Wright found he had not only lost the spring series by a mere 2.2 points, but had forfeited the windshield of his car during the afternoon. Two colored men attempted to steal the car and broke the windshield. They were captured by Police Officer Anthony Ritchie who was working on his boat at the club when the confusion took place. Police were holding the men for investigation last night.

German Netmen Win, Lead Series In Davis Cup Play

Warsaw, May 21 (AP).—With isolated groups of young students occasionally showing an unfriendly attitude, but with the crowd generally much quieter than during previous games, Germany defeated Poland in doubles today to take a 2-1 lead in their Davis Cup second-round match.

The German combination of Heinrich Henkel and George Metaxa overwhelmed Ignacy Tloczynski and Hebda 6—4, 6—2, 6—2. Two singles events are yet to be played.

The bleacher throngs demonstrated against the Germans yesterday because of an announcement that the doubles match would be delayed until Monday to give Henkel more rest. The decision to play it today as scheduled was made last night after the problem had been carried to the Davis Cup committee at London.

India Scores in Doubles

Brussels, May 21 (AP).—India's Davis cup tennis team trimmed Belgium's lead today in their European zone play by winning the doubles as Y. Savior-Ghaus Mohammed defeated the Gheelan-Van-Deneynde Duo 6—4, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.

That made the match standing 2-1 in favor of Belgium, its two victories in yesterday's singles.

Potomac Windjammers End Season in Hot Sun

Phillips Sisters Dominate Horse Show for Girl Scouts

The three Phillip sisters, Barbara, Janice and Margaret, took the lion's share of honors in the Girl Scout Horse Show yesterday at Rock Creek Riding Club, the first winning ribbons in the Girl Scout Class and obstacle race, and Janice and Margaret providing the thrills of a bareback exhibition.

Eleven-year-old Barbara's Girl Scout victory, achieved on Ecariment, was in the second section, while the first section went to Nancy Linkins, on Pepper.

Judges of the meet were Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Florida Senator, and Miss Mary Virginia Leckie. Senator Claude Pepper's Murwell furnished the thrills of a jumping exhibition with Betty Jullien up.

First Section—Girl Scout Class. (Judged on walk, trot, canter and dismounting at canter). Won by Nancy Linkins, on Pepper; second, Jane Wells on Gallops; third, Barbara Young on Elizabeth O; fourth, Rosemary May on Honey Girl.

Second Section—Girl Scout Class. Won by Barbara Phillips on Ecariment; second, Gene Ferris on January; third, Jean Crosby on Honey Girl; fourth, Marjorie Gichner, on Edith Caroline.

Obstacle Race—(Tested on requirements of Girl Scout horsemanship merit badge.) Won by Barbara Phillips on Gallops; second, Marjorie Gichner on Edith Carolina.

Bareback Exhibition—Janice Phillips, Margaret Phillips, Janet Gibson, Nancy Finlay.

Fairlawn Wins First Public Parks Match

Fairlawn, defending champion of the Public Parks Tennis League, started its title defense auspiciously yesterday with a 5-1 victory over Rock Creek in opening matches on the Fairlawn courts.

Singles

Contreras (F.) defeated Tarpley, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2; Herbert (F.) defeated Baker, 6—3, 2—6, 7—5; Smith (F.) defeated Goubeau, 6—0, 8—6; Lindsem (F.) defeated Burns, 6—3, 6—4.

Doubles

Tarpley and Goubeau (R. C.) defeated Hough and Smith, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2; Herbert and Lindsem (F.) defeated Baker and Burns, 7—5, 6—3.

Tsars Beaten, 7 to 3

B'nai B'rith diamonders took their sixth victory of the season yesterday when they whipped the Tsars, 7 to 3. Games with the winners may be arranged by calling Atlantic 3168.

Bethesda Caster Captures First State Tourney

Frederick, Md., May 21.—William B. Holton, Bethesda, a member of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Izaak Walton League Chapter, won the State fly-casting championship from a field of 20 of Maryland's leading casters at the State fish hatchery at Lewiston today.

He was presented a trophy by J. Hammond Brown, Baltimore, secretary of the Maryland Fish and Game Protective Association, sponsor of the event.

Holton nosed out Herman Schneider, of the Baltimore Casting Club, by 4 points. Several hundred persons from Maryland and the District of Columbia witnessed the events, first of their kind held in the State.

Yates, Bruen British Golf Favorites

Both Quoted 12-1 In Amateur Play Which Starts Today

By the Associated Press.

Hoylake, England, May 21.—Charlie Yates, Atlanta's cheerful cherub, and 19-year-old Jim Bruen, Britain's No. 1 Walker Cup player, were made joint favorites tonight to win the British amateur golf championship, starting tomorrow over the terrifying royal Liverpool course.

Yates, the defending champion, was rated behind Bruen yesterday, but inexplicably rallied tonight, though he did nothing more than take the Irish champion on an eel fishing expedition in the Irish Sea!

Both were quoted at 12 to 1. Hector Thomson, of Scotland, the 1936 winner, was next at 14 to 1, and after him, at 16 to 1, came "Trailer Bill" Holt, of Syracuse, long-hitting Dixie champion; Lem Crawley, English stylist, and Charlie Stowe, former British miner.

Three Other Americans

The three other Americans in the field are Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn.; Ed Phillips, hard-swinging Philadelphian, and Tennis Professional Ellsworth Vines, who took his first glance at the course today.

Although Vines starts late—on Wednesday—the experts think he will finish early. If he passes his first test, he probably will run into John Baillieu, a handsome and excellent player from Australia, in the third round.

Baillieu is quoted at odds of 20-1 along with Chapman. Walker Cup player Gordon Peters and Cyril Tolley, who won in 1920 and 1929.

The Hoylake course was closed today while the greens that have been comparatively slow were shaved and massaged.

Tough Course

This course is tougher than a 20-cent steak. Since 1933 when the Hon. Michael Scott won the tournament here the last time. A new set of tees has been built, some of them 80 yards behind the normal tee.

Though Yates is not complaining about the new tees, they have obviously caused him to readjust his game. On eight holes, even against a mild wind, the champion has been using wooden clubs for his second shots.

If there is not a great upset, Yates should meet Chapman in the third round Wednesday, Gordon Peters in the fifth round Thursday and Thomson in the quarterfinals.

Holt, who earned his nickname by traveling to tournaments in a trailer, is in the comparatively easy first quarter of the draw and can move into the quarterfinals without meeting any player of international reputation.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

Two really big channel bass have already been taken this season on the North Carolina coast. The first caught by an 11-year-old Norfolk boy weighed 73 pounds and 4 ounces ten hours after it was taken from the water. The second, caught this week in a net by Jamie Styron, guide and commercial fisherman of Ocracoke, weighed 75 pounds and equals the world's "caught by any method" record in Jordan and Everman.

ACKERMAN.

It is certain that the boy's fish caught at Oregon Inlet on rod and reel while fishing from Capt. Lee Dough's boat would have surpassed both the "sport" and "any method" records had it been weighed within a reasonable time for a 70-pound fish will dry out nearly five pounds in that length of time.

With such fish running the beaches there seems to be all sorts of chances for some lucky angler to hang up a new record this year. The next place for these big fish to hit is the section from Machaprague to Fox Hill Levels on the Maryland shore.

The Lerner-American Museum of Natural History expedition to New Zealand and Australia which has been conducting a scientific survey into the habits and migrations of marlin arrived in Los Angeles May 15 after four months down under. Mr. and Mrs. Lerner, fishing with Capt. Bill Hatch as guide, caught altogether 23 striped marlin, three blacks, eight mako sharks and two thresher sharks.

From the preliminary reports it looks as though every major objective was attained and a great amount of important material garnered pertaining to our greatest of all sport fishes.

During the winter we were more than a little intrigued by the feel and looks of a sample of a remarkable development in fishing lines by Ashaway—a braided fishing line, in all appearance no different from any of the finer braided silk lines used for bait casting and trolling in fresh waters. However, there is not a single solitary fiber of silk in it. Instead, it is braided of nylon yarn, a new chemical product the Dupont company is developing, of which the basic raw materials are coal, water and air.

Only this past week we received 200 yards of the 20-pound size as the necessary requisite for our entrance in an Ashaway contest for fishing scribes and radio commentators, and in a large piece looks even finer and more dependable than any line we have ever seen or used. It is with real impatience we await a chance to give it a tryout.

Hitch-Hiker Wins 50,000 Meter Walk

Ernie Crosbie's Final Spurt Beats Deni By One-Tenth Second

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 21.—Ernie Crosbie, of the Baltimore Cross Country Club, won the 50,000-meter National A. A. U. walking championship here today with a home stretch spurt which brought him in a tenth of a second ahead of John M. Deni, of Pittsburgh.

Crosbie, an automobile draftsman, and Deni walked neck and neck for 25 miles of the route of over 30 miles. As the two neared the finish line at the Cincinnati gym, Crosbie called upon a little extra strength and won in the time of 5 hours 19 minutes 33 3-10 seconds.

Leo Schneppel, of the Polish Falcons Club, of Roselle, N. J., failed to walk back to his stride of last year when he finished in front. The defending champion was third, making the distance in 5:25:09. Schneppel's time last year was 5:18:20.2.

Crosbie, a member of the last two Olympic walking teams, hitchhiked here to enter the contest. The heel and toe artists stepped off the distance in a hot sun, which forced five entrants to drop by the wayside. A field of 21 entered the race.

Snead, Guldahl Win Golf Match

Guldahl's putt on the second hole was the longest of the day, while he birdied all the par fives but the first hole.

Thomson was erratic from the tee and missed the green in regulation figures more than any of the others, but made several fine comebacks to stay under perfect figures for the round. He hit the ball harder than the others, but holes like the second, seventh and seventeenth his tee shots were way off line.

Cox missed there opportune putts, Wiffy playing his long putts close to the hole all day, but on the ninth hole he missed an 8-footer for a deuce that would have squared the match. On the seventeenth he played a fine second 6 feet from the cup, but was short in his birdie bid, in an attempt to send the match to the eighteenth.

Snead and Guldahl had a best ball of 64, eight under perfect figures, monopolizing the birdies with 13 out of the 21 in the foursome.

Several spectators were hit by wild shots, on the first and second shots, but the only damage was the loss of a little distance.

The camera fans had their day, with over half of the gallery carrying either still or movie cameras, and on several holes they obviously disturbed the players.

Jack Redmond, the "round the world" trick-shot artist, went through his entire routine twice, preceding the match. He received a big hand for the show that has amused golfers of several continents.

Terrors Are Victors

Chevy Chase Terrors baseball team defeated Neighborhood House, 9-5, yesterday behind the four-hit pitching of Bill Boyd. Boyd fanned 15. John Mudd led the winners at bat with three hits.

Buck Powell Stars

Buck Powell pitched Leeway A. C. to a close 8-to-7 victory over Brightwood yesterday, granting but seven hits and fanning 13.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Joe Krakauskas was a hero in defeat yesterday and to him goes the chief award of points in the latest distribution in the Man of the Month contest.

To Krakauskas, five points, because he kept the Nats in the ball game by holding the White Sox to two runs in the first nine innings and because he made a hit that evolved as the tying run in the sixth inning.

To Taft Wright, three points, because he drove in the tying run in the fourth inning with his centerfield single at a time when two were out.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, despite the fact he went hitless, because he drove in a run with a long fly and played a brilliant game in the field.

The totals:

Taft Wright	24	Buddy Myer	7
Jimmy Wasdell	15	Rick Ferrell	6
George Case	15	Jake Early	6
Cecil Travis	14	Dutch Leonard	5
Alex Alexandra	11	Walter Masterson	5
Bobby Estalella	11	Joe Haynes	5

Condolences Pour Into Carr Home; Burial Wednesday

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 21.—Messages of condolence today poured into the home of Joseph F. Carr, whose death late yesterday removed from the sports world one of its major figures, from sports leaders who planned to attend funeral services here Wednesday for the 58-year-old president of the National Football League and promotional director of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. Carr was stricken with a heart ailment. Survivors besides his widow include two children, Joseph, jr., and Mary, and three brothers, John Carr, of Chicago, and Michael and Edward, both of Columbus.

McAleer, Fuchs Lead 4-Ball Semi-Finalists

Congressional Pair Joined by Another D. C. Team and Two Baltimore Duos in State Play; Beaver Dam Beaten by Rolling Road

By Merrell Whittlesey

Earl McAleer and Louis Fuchs, Congressional's No. 1 team, led one other District and two Baltimore combinations into the semifinal round of the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball championships yesterday at Capital, defeating Otto Greiner and Ed Steinbert, top duo of Rodgers Forge 1, 2 and 1.

Claude Rippy and Jock Olmstead, Indian Spring No. 2, had little difficulty with the Baltimore Country Club representatives, Edgar Lucas and William G. Eager, winning 4 and 3.

Beaver Dam's hopes for the title, John F. Miller and Joe Balestri, could not match the best ball of Ernie Caldwell and Gene Bruning, the No. 2 team from Rolling Rroad, losing 4 and 3, while Rolling Road duplicated Indian Spring's 1938 feat by placing two teams in the semifinals, Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes winning, 3 and 2, over Robert Jones and Jess Dowling, jr. Barnes and Overton are the top team from the Catonsville Club.

Only Match in Doubt

Only the Congressional-Baltimore match was in doubt until the finishing holes, the others finding the eventual winners with sufficient leads all the way.

McAleer and Greiner had 75s, with the former's deuce on the fifteenth hole giving the winners a two-up lead. They halved the sixteenth hole in fives, and when Greiner's tee shots on the par 3 seventeenth stopped 3 inches short of an ace, Fuchs replied by chipping in the cup for a deuce from off the edge for the 2 and 1 margin.

KENWOOD

L. H. Hagerla won the Board of Governors Trophy at Kenwood, coupling two consistent rounds of 84, 83—167, which minus a combined handicap of 28 left a 139 net score, the winning total by two strokes.

John Bergelin, club champion, was second with 75, 74—149—18, 141.

A. H. Foster was third, scoring 78, 79—157—15, 142, while Charles L. Vaile complete the prize winners with 81, 77—158—15, 143.

MANOR

Mrs. Jack Stadler and Mack Myers won the mixed scotch foursome at Manor with a 64 gross, playing well under their 23 handicap with an 87.

Three tied for second prize with net totals of 66, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McCreery, 84, 18—66; Mrs. George Diffenbaugh and R. C. Pettingill, 82, 16—66, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Neff, 81, 15—66.

WASHINGTON

Mrs. Wilda Martin and John Nicoll paced the Mixed Scotch Foursome field at Washington Golf and Country Club, with 86-14, 72, while Mr. and Mrs. Phelps Adams were second with 104-31, 73.

Two tied for third prize, Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Franklin, 96-22, 74, and Dr. and Mrs. Marion Falls with a like score.

CAPITAL

F. S. Rinaica won the Henry Williams Cup at Capital Club with a net score of 58, playing the course in 79 strokes and deducting a 21 handicap.

The entire list of prize winners will be due for a lot of handicap cutting by the committee as all net scores were 67 or better. E. G. Calahan was second with 82-19, 63, while H. Lineweaver had 90-25, 65, and F. G. O'Connell 83-18, 65, for a third place tie. Other winners included William Pendergast, 74-8, 66, L. J. Manders, 88-22, 66, J. H. Carpenter, 83-17, 66, H. E. Davis, 90-23, 67, and F. V. Fitzgerald, 92-25, 67.

George Molloy won low gross with a 73, three over par.

WOODMONT

Howard Nordlinger and Jerry Brode tied in Class A of the Woodmont Sweepstakes, the former scoring 75-9, 69, and Brode 81-12, 69. Golf Committee Chairman Leopold Freudberg had 85-15, 70, for third prize, while William Ilch, 84-13, 71, and Charles Schulman, 83-12, 71, were among the A prize winners.

Ned Bord and Alan Goldenburg also caused a deadlock in Class B, Bord scoring 83-16, 67, and Goldenberg, 84-17, 67.

ARGYLE

Three tied with rag 74's in the Blind Bogey event at Argyle, W. C. McLeod, P. F. Brousseau and Ray Lawrenson.

Argyle Record Broken by 31

Maurice Cooper set a new nine-hole mark for the Argyle course yesterday, dropping five birdie putts and adding four pars for a 31, five under par.

Playing with W. A. Taylor, Perc LeDuc and E. L. Mifflin, Cooper broke the old mark of 32 held by Roger Peacock and George Diffenbaugh.

His score was official as it was in the qualifying for the club ladder. Copper had a 41 on the first nine and the 31 netted a 72, even par, and the top post on the ladder with 73-72—145.

Canada's King Of Horseshoes Is Winner Here

McLaughlin Defeats Henson; D. C. Ringers Split Other Matches

Dean McLaughlin, the sturdy 12-year-old who holds most of Canada's horseshoe - pitching titles, proved the brand of ringers the Canadians throw is superior to that in this section yesterday when he made a recovery to defeat Clayton C. Henson by a score of 4 to 1 on the Mall courts. The latter is Arlington County champion, and one of the outstanding throwers in metropolitan Washington.

Henson won the first game of the match, 50-43, with his best ringer average of the day, 61.1. Henson's recent operation, plus McLaughlin's steady tossing, began to tell on him after that and the young Canadian won the next four in a row.

The matches, inaugurating the Mall's 12 new pitching courts, were the first with an international flavor ever held in Washington. Team matches which took up several hours after the McLaughlin-Henson feature were split even. Standout performers from the Washington area took the "B" matches, 5 to 1, and, paced by McLaughlin and his brother, Roy, the Canadians won a 4-to-2 decision in the "A" section.

James Lovett Tops Batters In Interhigh

Hitting at .545 Clip To Lead Kendall of Tech for Honors In Season's Race

By Bill Burnett

James (Puddin') Lovett, the bandy-legged moundsman who has figured in each of Eastern's three interhigh baseball victories, steps out in a new role with the release of unofficial batting averages. His single in one official time at bat Friday, as the Tide whipped Tech in ten innings, brought his average to a brilliant .545, well ahead of the next slugger in the series, Charley Kendall, of Tech.

Kendall moved into second place in the standings despite his club's beating by Eastern. Three singles in six times gave him a .462. Roosevelt's Jimmy Robertson, leader until Friday, dropped to third place with .438.

In all there are 27 batsmen on the seven interhigh teams hitting .300 or better. Before the games that closed out last week's efforts, there were only 22. Western and Wilson, with 15 extra base hits apiece, led the heavy hitting.

Interhigh players start the final week of hostility before the championship game, May 31, tomorrow. Four games are on the schedule, and because five teams are still very much in the running for the two titles, East and West, it is a near certainty that a playoff will be necessary. In that case, the championship game at Griffith Stadium may be postponed a week.

Following are the averages:

Hudkins Recovering From Auto Accident

San Francisco, Calif., May 21.—Ace Hudkins, once a well-known prize fighter, is "recovering nicely" at South San Francisco Hospital from injuries he suffered in an automobile accident Thursday, the hospital reported today.

Physicians at first expressed fear they might have to amputate one leg, badly mangled, but attendants said today such danger apparently was past.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

We've all been taking bowing lessons in our house. That means your neck starts at the waist.

Case's Error in Tenth Helps Chisox Beat Nats

Marvin Owen, Chisox third baseman, scored from second on Pitcher Ted Lyon's single to rightfield in the second inning yesterday. Taft Wright's peg to Catcher Ferrell was a trifle late made a complete capture too late. By the time that his throw reached the plate, Appling had legged it from first to home with the run that won the ball game.

Twice the Nats came from behind with great difficulty to tie the score against Lyons who was serving up a heady assortment of slow stuff and walking nobody in contrast to Krakauskas' seven passes. The White Sox might have had a commanding lead save for the fact that two runs were cut off at the plate. Radcliff was out attempting to score on a double steal in the third inning, and Tresh was nipped at the plate when he tried to score from first on a looping single by Lyons in the eighth.

Lyons was a help to the White Sox even when he wasn't pitching. He personally drove in the Sox's first run when he singled in the second inning after Owen had been walked by Krakauskas. The Sox collected their second run in the sixth after Kreevich doubled to right. Mike Tresh scored him with a single to center.

The Nats didn't get a hit until Bobby Estalella beat out an infield roller in the third inning, but Case inspired a Washington run in the fourth when he singled. Lewis moved him to second with an infield out and when Wasdell grounded to Lyons, Case who was trapped, scampered between bases long enough to permit Wasdell to take second. Then Taft Wright, the league's leading run producer, produced a run with a single to center.

Krakauskas singled to center to open the sixth inning for the Nats and with the help of his ultimate grief-bearer, Case, he scored the tying run. Case singled to center and when Kreevich juggled the ball for an error, Krakauskas raced to third, from which point Buddy Lewis scored him with a long fly to Kreevich.

After that, the Nats were virtually helpless against old-timer Lyons. Cecil Travis made a useless single with one out in the seventh, and Buddy Myer beat out a cheap hit in the ninth. The Nats' tenth-inning reply to the final White Sox run consisted of Bobby Estalella's strikeout, Rick Ferrell's line drive into Joe Kuhel's mitt, and Pinch Hitter Charley Gelbert's valiant but useless drive to center which Kreevich speared.

Steel Output, 45 Per Cent, This Year's Low

But Heavy Buying Of Sheet and Strip May Halt Decline

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 21.—Recent heavy buying of sheet and strip steel, induced by recent price slashing, is expected to retard the decline in ington production, the magazine Steel reported today.

The national rate even may increase moderately, the publication said, some producers stepping up operations last week. Sharp reductions in a few districts, however, lowered the national average 1½ points to 45 per cent of capacity, a new low for the year.

Steel reported a measure of stability has returned to flat-rolled steel prices, "but largely for the same reason that the fire goes out after the house burns down." Consumers already have covered for future needs, it said, and are out of the market. Business not influenced by price considerations remained fairly steady, with consumption in some districts tending slightly upward.

Warehouse Sales Gain

Warehouse sales are heavier, but shipments to automobile manufacturers for new models are not expected for several weeks, a factor that will prevent a sharp upturn immediately in production of flat-rolled products recently booked. Tin plate production held steady at 70 per cent last week, but railroad steel markets were slow, with few inquiries.

Ingot production gains last week included 2 to 57 at Birmingham, 2½ to 37½ at Buffalo and 4½ to 50 at Cleveland. Pittsburgh dropped 3 to 33, Chicago 1 to 45½, Cincinnati 8 to 44, Wheeling 11 to 53 and St. Louis 12 to 39. Unchanged were Eastern Pennsylvania at 37, Detroit at 59, New England at 45 and Youngstown at 42.

There was little activity in the scrap market, the composite being lowered 16 cents to $13.96 by a price reduction at Pittsburgh.

IMPORTED CHURCH'S SHOES

Accent on Elegance

"Summer shoes styled and made by Church of England" means — what? Granted that summer styles preferred in England and America look alike. But go below the surface, consider how they are made . . . right there is the difference. Church's are made better, to fit better and hold their smartness longer . . . that's why they are the choice of men who want the best in footwear.

Public Spending Is Financed By the Bankers, Babson Says

Capital Has Been Retreating Into U. S. Bonds for 5 Years, He Declares, With Some Issues Yielding Under 1 Per Cent

By Roger W. Babson

New York City, May 21.—One of the toughest jobs in the financial world today is the protection of money and property. The yield on money is lower than ever and the risks and taxes greater than ever. Consequently, bankers and investors are scared to death. They do not know what to do. They feel that whatever move they make will be wrong. They have never been so hard pressed before—not even in the abyss of the depression.

ROGER W. BABSON

The only securities which now meet with favor here on Wall Street are Government bonds. Capital has been retreating into these issues for the past five years. Because the five-year notes are tax-free, they meet with an artificial demand. From one end of the earth to the other, United States Government bonds are considered the strongest investments that can be bought. A number of factors have boosted these bonds to the highest price level in history so that certain issues yield less than 1 per cent.

Why "Governments" Are Favored

These Government bonds are particularly favored by managers of institutional and trust funds. Such people believe their primary job is to maintain the principal of the funds committed to their care. Income is a secondary consideration with them. Whereas ten years ago a conservative investment fund might yield 5 per cent, today it yields 2 or 3 per cent. Bankers prefer United States "Governments" because they are exchangeable into dollar bills at any time. A bank's only obligation is to pay depositors "dollars" regardless of what the purchasing power of these dollars will be. Trustees, too, are buying "Governments" because they feel the price of these bonds will hold up.

I seriously question the action of both trustees and bankers on two grounds. First, I believe that interest rates will eventually advance. Either a business boom or a war would increase money rates and shove down the high price of "Governments." Even if the price did hold up, the purchasing power of their income and principal would decline. Buying Government bonds, therefore, may be as risky business today as was the buying of common stocks in 1928—except for those who want ready funds with which to meet death taxes.

Registration

The second reason why I question the purchase of Government bonds is the financial status of the United States Government. If these bonds had to be registered with the Securities Exchange Commission in the same way that private bonds must be, I doubt if many could be marketed. Such registration statement would have to show that the United States Government has not even earned operating expenses for ten years. What corporation could get bankers to pay a premium for its 2 per cent bonds if it had only earned half of its operating expenses for eight consecutive years?

Yet, good corporation bonds can be bought to yield 4 per cent. These are obligations of well-run companies manufacturing or merchandising useful products. Ultimately, the future of Government bonds depends upon the making of money by these private companies. Interest on Government bonds is paid out of taxes. Corporation income taxes are the most lucrative form of taxes. These are not collected until the interest on corporation bonds is paid. Hence, no corporation profits—no taxes. Therefore, from a security standpoint, these corporation bonds should be excellent.

Repudiation or Inflation

Bankers and trustees must realize that Federal debt can be reduced only in two ways: (1) By outright repudiation (which means simply canceling the debt), or (2) inflation (which has the same effect in a round-about way). Because they are buying Government bonds, however, these bankers and trustees feel that when repudiation or inflation ultimately comes the public will not blame them.

Despite their hatred of the Administration's financial policies (and I suppose no group hates the New Deal more) these bankers and trustees do not have the guts to refuse to buy Government bonds and put a stop to the whole miserable mess. Some of them tell us, "You can't definitely say that we will have inflation or repudiation, Mr. Babson. It is not yet clear that we will." Well, perhaps not. It is not yet clear that Christmas is coming again, either. I ask these men, "How can current public debts ever be paid off?"

Some answer, "They do not have to be paid off so long as they do not get any bigger." My retort is that public debt will continue to multiply unless public spending is slashed or taxes boosted. Can Federal spending, for instance, ever be reduced 50 per cent? Anyone who thinks it can be cut should just review the history of the present session of Congress. It was widely advertised as an economy session. A week ago the Senate passed the largest farm appropriation bill in history by a vote of 61 to 14! Taxes can be increased easier than spending can be reduced. However, if taxes are pushed much higher I fear a national sit-down strike of taxpayers!

Meanwhile, the lazy public goes on voting for the Pied Pipers who got us into this jam. If the spending fund of these public vultures could be cut off by those who still control the country's capital markets we would take our first step on the long come-back trail. Our bankers and trustees are not only jeopardizing the interest of their own depositors and beneficiaries, but they are putting an artificially high price on Government bonds. The smaller investor, less well-informed, buys "Governments" because he thinks their high price means stability and safety. Yes, every time I visit New York City I feel a great need for bankers and trustees with character and courage!

Rukeyser Says: Wisconsin Is Trying to Aid Business

International News Service Economic Commentator.

New York, May 21.—As national "business appeasement" appears to have slowed up, it is interesting to observe similar movements in various States. Wisconsin, for example, under the governorship of Julius P. Heil, veteran industrialist, is in the process of professing to make laws and the administration thereof more definitely helpful to business and employment.

Stressing economy and efficiency, Gov. Heil and his Republican-Democratic coalition Legislature are discussing ways and means of demobilizing the "little New Deal" set up in that Commonwealth under former Gov. Philip La Follette.

The Wisconsin experiment in undoing some of the basic laws passed in 1937, when La Follette forces dominated the Legislature, may be prophetic of what will happen nationally "when, as, and if" a probusiness Administration comes into office at Washington as a result of next year's election.

From the business viewpoint, this writer is less interested in the political and theoretical controversies involved in the Wisconsin demobilization of "reforms" than he is in photographing what is taking place in that Commonwealth.

Some Laws Repealed

Besides the repealing of the little Wagner act and the substitution of a law intended to be fair to employers as well as to workers, the group now in the saddle in Wisconsin is also eyeing critically four other major pieces of La Follette economic legislation:

1. The little TVA law adopted in 1937 is permitted to lapse through the decision of the Legislature to cut off its annual appropriation. The purpose of the act was to encourage municipal ownership of utilities through setting up a private, nonprofit-making corporation to which State funds were to be granted to carry on the work. The looseness of the act, according to opponents, could put the State in any conceivable type of business. As a result of a Supreme Court decision, the activities of the Wisconsin development authority were restricted to promotion only.

2. Likewise, the Legislature is lopping off the appropriation for the Wisconsin agricultural authority, set up by the 1937 special session. The promotional work intended will be referred to the State department of agricultural, and advocates of this change promise savings.

3. A department of commerce was set up to make surveys, attract industries to the State, and keep present companies in the State. Opponents held that the department was set up to refute the charge that La Follette taxes were driving industry out of the State. A current appropriation would permit one survey but the department is abolished.

Wide Powers Abolished

4. The La Follette reorganization bill passed by the 1937 Legislature gave the executives sweeping powers to transfer functions and personnel from one department to another. The orders were to have the effect of law unless one house of the Legislature at the next convening session should veto the changes. The present Legislature vetoed such changes.

The Heil administration is supporting a reorganization bill to set up a unified public welfare department to administer pension aids, blind aids, aids to dependent children and mothers, and supervise generally all institutions.

In connection with the revision of the labor legislation, it is significant that, as in Oregon, the labor laws were changed at the behest of organized agriculture. Farmers took the view that labor disturbances and arbitrary increases were charges against farmers, who bought the goods of industry.

Wisconsin's Labor Law

The new Wisconsin law, though criticized by labor, is less stringent than the Oregon law. The new Wisconsin measure creates a board of three with quasi-judicial powers, without the investigatory powers of the former board. It now requires 10 days notice of strikes on interruptions affecting perishable farm products; bans secondary boycotts; permits the checkoff only at the written request of the employe; prohibits a closed shop unless 75 per cent of the employes so vote by secret ballot; and redefines a labor dispute to be one existing only between an employer and the majority of his employes in a bargaining unit, outlawing 'stranger' picketing.

Under this new act, Gov. Heil has sent to the Senate for confirmation the names of one industrialist, one union representative from the Railway Brotherhood, ad a representative of the general public.

Tax Load Rarely Wipes Out Profit, Notre Dame Says

Notre Dame, Ind., May 21.—That taxes rarely place a sufficient burden on any business to keep it from operating at a profit is the conclusion indicated in a study of the State of Indiana's resources, just released by the University of Notre Dame's Bureau of Economic Research.

Analysis of 111 Hoosier industries shows that while profits might have been greater, or losses less, without taxes, in no case was the tax load enough to cause a deficit at the end of a year's operations. These findings appear in "The Physical Assets of Indiana and the Earnings and Distribution of Income of Indiana Corporations," a companion volume to a study of the physical assets of the United States, which was published recently by the university.

The report demonstrates graphically that "bad management" is one of the major handicaps of business; that taxes rarely are sufficient in themselves to be of an important factor in profit or loss operations over an extended period; and that adequate use of Federal income-tax reports will provide much of the information about national resources for which business and State and National Govrnments are claiming.

Tropical Fruit Boom

Miami, Fla., May 21.—Anticipating continuation of the trend toward greater use of exotic tropical fruits in the American diet, 1,500 acres in the rich Everglades adjacent to Miami recently have been opened to cultivate papayas, sapodillas, avocados, guavas, mangoes and pomegranates.

World Commodity Index

New York, May 21 (AP).—The General Motors-Cornell world price index of 40 basic commodities advanced to 61.4 during the week ended May 13 from 61 in the preceding week. The United States index in gold increased 1 point to 63.4.

N. J. May Share In Poison Trials

Philadelphia, May 21 (U.P.).—Possibility that New Jersey will handle prosecution of an important suspect in the merchants of death syndicate was indicated tonight as police announced that Mrs. Rose Carina, 45, the "widow with the kiss of death," had given them important information.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt said Mrs. Carina, suspected of five of the ring's reputed more than 100 murders, would be charged only with the death of Pietro Stea, South Philadelphia grocer.

Dominick Rodia, 51, sought in the drowning of Joseph Arena off Sea Isle City, N. J., was to be arraigned before Judge Harry S. McDevitt tomorrow, and was expected to be extradited to New Jersey.

N. Y. Judge's Bribe Trial Opens Today

New York, May 21.—County Judge George Martin, of Brooklyn, will go on trial in Brooklyn Supreme Court tomorrow in the first criminal trial undertaken by Special Prosecutor John Harlan Amen since he was sworn in as an assistant attorney general to supersede District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan.

Martin is accused of bribery, accepting an unlawful fee and conspiracy to obstruct justice, in allegedly taking $1,000 to protect a Brooklyn, abortionist.

Court Rules Fish Out as Co-respondents

Milwaukee, May 21 (AP).—Circuit Judge William F. Shaughnessy yesterday denied divorces to two "fishing widows" who cited their husband's frequent fishing trips as cause for divorce. Said the judge: "Fishing is a wholesome recreation which husbands are entitled to enjoy. A wife who objects to her husband going fishing is unreasonable and overexacting."

Volunteer Worker

EDWIN T. THAYER

Thayer Aids Boys' Project At Kensington

Former 'Problem Child' Volunteers His Services

Inspired by the potentialities of the recently launched Boys Town movement in Kensington, Md., a prominent sociologist and criminologist—himself a former "problem child"—has volunteered his services as associate director of the project.

He is Edwin T. Thayer, 33, former field organizer for the National Crime Prevention Institute, one-time New York settlement houseworker, and once-director of the Cleveland Park Extension Center here, who is assisting the Rev. D. Wade Safford, Christ Episcopal rector and "guiding genius" behind the town.

With the rectory on Knowles avenue as their headquarters, the rector and Thayer have seven boys of the community under their "wing," and are directing their energies into constructive channels through co-operative activity in a religious atmosphere.

Thayer, who admitted that he had been "quite a problem child," and had run away from home on numerous occasions, feels that "problem children," generally speaking, can be changed if removed from old environmental influences.

He praised the co-operation of Edgar G. Jewell, principal of the Kensington Junior High School; Tolman Riggs, athletic coach; Mrs. Sadie Wisner, former Juvenile Court probation officer; Walter S. Pratt, James E. Malcolm and Robert L. Lewis, of Christ Church, and others.

Special interest in the work also has been shown by Dean Powell, of Washington Cathedral; C. Gresham Marmiom, assistant rector of St. Albans Church; Mrs. James E. Lamb and Mrs. Randolph Menefee.

Also co-operating are the managements of the Earle, Capitol and Columbia theaters, who invite the youngsters as their guests once monthly. Next Wednesday afternoon the boys will be guests of Mrs. Robert West and their family, friends of Thayer, at a picnic in Rock Creek Park.

Dr. Benes Asks League to Act on Czech Invasion

Chicago, May 21 (AP).—Dr. Eduard Benes, former president of Czecho-Slovakia, appealed to the League of Nations today to "act on Germany's invasion" of the now-dissolved republic "and Hungary's invasion of parts of Slovakia and subcarpathic Russia."

Dr. Benes said he sent notes of protest to the League's Council, scheduled to meet at Geneva tomorrow, as well as to Great Britain, France and Russia.

"Czecho-Slovakia, though it continues to exist legally, has temporarily no method of procedure and is unable to present itself in Geneva in the fullness of her rights because of oppression and violence," Dr. Benes said.

He declined to comment on reports from Paris that a plot had been discovered in Prague to assassinate him in the United States.

Contract Bridge

By R. F. Foster.

Bridge behavior is a matter of the company you keep. Some players have thin skins, are extremely sensitive to the slightest criticism, and with them the only course, albeit somewhat hypercritical, is to smile sweetly and accept the blunders without comment. Others enjoy indulging in lusty good-humored complaints, and as long as all four are in the spirit of the thing, no harm is done. But the insidious effect of fault-finding, however innocently it starts, is that it is apt to become an unpleasant habit.

It is too easy to slip into habitual "constructive" criticism to bolster one's own weaknesses. It is too easy to wear it as a mark of superiority and unwittingly cut to the quick sensitive but earnest students of the game.

While an overdose of sweetness, a curled lip, a lifted eyebrow are more humiliating than a rousing blast of blame, criticism is apt to lead to quarreling and quarreling to lost bridge partnerships. Besides, no one can win a bridge argument, anyway.

As much as we may deplore excessive criticism, contract bridge is a breeding ground of complaints. However we may wish to rule out quarreling, there are times when it is hard not to indorse a good free-for-all fight.

We would prefer to offer swords or pistols to today's North and South, then skip to the safety of a nearby tree to watch the murder, rather than attempt to arbitrate which player was wrong and why.

Says contributor G. L., jr.:

"The small slam as a lay-down in hearts, and as the cards lie a grand slam can be made either by a spade finesse, or a squeeze on East.

"I see no quarrel with the four-heart bid, although I think a pass over four spades by North is atrocious. However, it is my bid over the four hearts that is not satisfactory.

"Should the proper bid be four no trump, six hearts, or something else over the pre-emptive opening, or should I have sighed and passed?"

Why not bid six hearts and hope for the best? Four spades only clouds the issue and fails sadly in telling partner of the real strength of the hand.

We won't mention anything about North's pass of four spades. Atrocious is a harsh word, but sometimes it is the only one that fits.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Forty-four book publishers and leaders in the publishing industry addressed a letter yesterday to Representative Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the House Subcommittee to investigate WPA, answering charges that books by the Federal Writers' Project are vehicles of propaganda or inferior to other publications in quality.

Urging the maintenance of the Federal Writers' Project as a means of stimulating the book and allied industries and of giving employment to writers and editors, the joint statement also calls for the continuation of the American Guide Series, major work of the project.

The letter is signed by many prominent book publishers of New York, Boston and Chicago, among them Harcourt Brace Co., Viking Press, Random House, Inc., Longmans Green & Co., Oxford University Press, Simon & Schuster, W. W. Norton, William Morrow & Co., Henry Holt & Co., Literary Guild of America, Hale Cushman & Flint, Alfred A. Knopf, Farrar and Rinehart, Bobbs-Merrill.

Books by the Federal Writers' Project "contain far less personal bias than is usually found in books dealing with the American scene," the letter said.

Local No. 2, United Federal Workers of America, has indorsed the national emergency conference to combat repressive legislation, it was revealed yesterday.

The resolution said that the unit was offering its "support in awakening the thinking American people to the dangers of such oppressive, discriminatory, and un-American legislation" as proposed the anti-alien laws. Copies of the resolution have been sent the proper Houses and Senate committees.

Federal Employes Playhouse, sponsored by the Agriculture branch of the NFFE, announces that two films— "Three Women" and "Father of the Cradle of Waters"—will be shown Thursday in the Agriculture auditorium.

Also on the program will be the 30-voice playhouse chorus, directed by Lynn L. Gillchrest, soloist, duets, quartets and others. Louise Osterwald will be there with her accordion.

Administrator Andrews of the Wage and Hour division announced yesterday that revised regulations have been formulated governing the issuance of special certificates to employers permitting their employment of learners at wages lower than the legal minimum wage.

The amended regulations permit employment of learners at rates below the minimum "when found necessary to prevent curtailment of employment opportunities." Andrews emphasized that learner's certificates cannot be retroactive.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will lead the last U. F. W. A. forum next Monday at 4:40 p. m., in the South Building Auditorium. He will talk on the future of agriculture in relation to the jobs of Agriculture Department employes. Irwin Elber will talk at tonight's meeting on "The Changing American Scene as Observed Through the Eyes of a Labor Organizer." Meeting is set for 8 p. m. at 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Park Service, has planned a full day next Sunday for nature lovers. A bird walk from 7 to 8:30 a. m. will start the day, led by Lewis W. Kehr, ranger-naturalist. He will lead the party through the Glover - Archbold Parkway, starting from Reservoir road and Forty-fourth street northwest. The Potomac Heights bus runs to the starting point.

A tree and flower walk at Barnard Hill Park will be led by the same nature enthusiast from 2:30 to 4:30 Sunday afternoon. The starting point will be Randolph and Twenty-second streets northeast.

Donald Edward McHenry and William R. Hall will lead an all-day motor trip, picnic and nature walk through the Chopawamsic Recreational Demonstration area, near Quantico, Va. Don't forget to bring lunch, bathing suit and bath towel. If you have your own car, go south on U. S. Route 1 to Dumfries, Va., and then follow the signs to Chopawamsic. Special buses will leave 1416 F street northwest at 8:30 a. m. Round trip fare, $1.50.

Eight short educational films will be shown tomorrow at 8 a. m. in the Departmental Auditorium, Twelfth street and Constitution avenue northwest.

Bob Burns Says—

Most of the trouble in this world is due to folks not thinkin'. If you'll just sit down an' think things out before goin' about a job, nine times out of ten, it'll turn out right. That is unless you're eatin' spaghetti.

Last spring I went over to Uncle Slug's house and him and his wife were sittin' up on the hog pen stile, lookin' mighty mournful. I said, "What's wrong with you two?"

And Slug said, "Aw, Skaggie here is too doggoned absent-minded. We just got through plantin' the garden an' we're both worryin' over what's gonna happen—I swallowed the sweet peas and she planted my liver pills."

Gen. Scott, Tablet To Be Unveiled

A bronze tablet in memory of the late Maj. Gen. Hugh Lenox Scott, former Chief of Staff, will be unveiled in the south nave crypt of Washington Cathedral at 5 p. m. today.

The presentation address will be made by Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray, representing the Chief of Staff and Secretary of War. Miss Anna Hunter Scott Stockton, a granddaughter of Gen. Scott, is to unveil the tablet, which will be formally accepted by Bishop James E. Freeman.

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

Chapter XV.

Anthony's slapping Peg had the desired effect. She became calm. To their inquiries she told them Paul had not harmed her, but she was silent about what had happened. Then she was told that Duncan had been found in a dead stupor from liquor, and was sleeping in his room. Anthony had found him. Peg didn't know what caused Duncan's downfall, but the next morning Duncan, partially recovering his senses, again lived through a previous night when Nadeja had sought to gain from him certain valuable inventions which she wanted to sell to a foreign country. Joan burst onto the scene and announced that she was "on her own," that she was now a saleswoman in a Washington dress shop.

Anthony was the first to speak to Joan. He said: "Joan, you can't do this. Of course, I'm going to hustle you in a plane and ship you straight back to New York."

Joan said hotly: "You're going to do nothing of the sort. I was 18 this morning. That makes me of age in Washington." Then she came up close to Anthony and began fidgeting with his coat lapel. "You might just as well take this in your stride, sour-puss," she said, softly. "I'm here and I'm staying. Some people take 50 years to find out what they want in life. It took me only 17. I don't want any part of a finishing school. I don't want to stand in a receiving line beside Uncle Nathaniel and Aunt Bess while they introduce me to New York. I don't want to carry a muff of gardenias and wear a big, flowing organdy skirt and to say all the right things at all the right times. I'd absolutely cringe with hypocrisy. Look, Anthony, you're hitch-hiking your way down the road you want to go. Why haven't I that same right?"

They could do nothing about Joan's determination and they knew it. Aunt Mehalie was the first to melt perceptibly. She went over to Joan and put her thin little arms around her. "For an old spinster," she said, waveringly, "I'm doing right well in the children line. You're welcome, darling . . . if Anthony will let you stay."

Anthony did let her stay. "Girls in their teens are certainly weazel-wits," was how he summed it up. Peg showed Joan to her room and the little red-head fluttered around it, delighted. "They're wearing hoop skirts again this winter," she said, brightly. "They'll go perfect in this house with its newel posts and its Colonial fireplaces and all these precious old antiques."

Then Peg wanted to know how she managed to get a job so soon. "I've got to start looking for one myself on Monday," she explained. "I don't know typing either. Not yet."

Getting a Job

Joan wrinkled her nose impishly. She said, "It was a pushover, Peg. Honestly. A man came barging up to me. He said, 'What is your pleasure, miss?' And I said, 'Drinking and flinging woo, but at the moment I'm looking for a job.' That was about all. I got the job finally. Eighteen a week, commissions thrown in. I've always hated salesgirls who plunked something on you that was made to fit Omar the Tentmaker, and then went off into agonies of delight over how you looked. But I get it now. I expect to swoon about 50 times a day henceforth, simply overcome at the way Pierre's customers look in Pierre's creations. Commissions, my dear, is the answer. The good old 2 per cent." And then Joan added, giggling, "Just what is 2 per cent of 100 simoleons, Peg? I've neglected my higher mathematics no end!"

Peg grinned. "You got me, pal. Once over 10 and with my hands in mittens, I'm a washout."

"Toes aren't any good, either," mourned Joan. "You can't wiggle 'em one at a time. If you could, you wouldn't have to worry about a job of work. Barnum & Bailey would snap you up—just like that."

Presently Joan was at the window, looking down upon the quiet little street. The city wore the snow now like a party dress. She was saying, softly: "There's something about Georgetown, Peg. I'm going to be happy here, Peg. Maybe for the first time in my life."

She wheeled around and leaned back a little against the window, the sun making fire of her hair, something elfin and green of her tiny body. "Where is Duncan?" she asked, frankly. "After all, he is the piece de resistance of this trek South."

Peg told her about Duncan. Joan paled visibly and one small hand fingered the base of her throat. She didn't say very much. Just: "Duncan isn't a drinking guy. Maybe the blonde femme fatale curled up her nicely pedicured toes and died, and Duncan went off on a binge to forget. I hope that explains it."

Peg grinned and then suddenly she wasn't grinning at all. Aunt Mehalie was calling from the bottom of the stair-well. Aunt Mehalie was saying in her thin little voice:

Visit From Hewitt

"Peg! P-e-g! Mr. Gill is down here. Can you see him now?"

Joan bit her lower lip. "Enter trouble for Anthony," she said softly to herself. And then, "Peg, if you could have seen Anthony's face the other night at the embassy when you were dancing with this Gill party . . ." She didn't go on. Peg was no longer in the room.

Peg sped down the stairs lightly, her heart kicking against her side. In the front living room she could see Hewitt waiting by the mantel, his hands dug down deep in his pockets, his shoulders hunched up a little.

As she neared the living room she was so excited she was uncertain of herself. But there was one thing she was certain of: She didn't want to see Hewitt in that living room with Anthony standing tall and blond and scowling by the window; with Aunt Mehalie sitting prim and stiff by the open fire. She couldn't say anything there but the most banal things, a conversation that would include them all.

She paused by the door. She said, "Hewitt . . ." in a small, choked voice and found herself utterly unable to go on. She didn't have to go on, because Hewitt looked up, swiftly, came straight to her.

He took her cold little hands and held them fiercely tight in his own palms, his dark eyes searching her face. And in that moment she forgot everything else in the world but his hands and his eyes and the sharp sweet song of her blood.

But she couldn't just stand here like this; she had to say something. She said, a little weakly, not looking at Anthony or Aunt Mehalie . . . conscious, too, that she was being ill-bred and rude in not including them in her words: "I have to make some—some orangeade for Joan. You'll excuse me, won't you . . . for just a moment?"

Her cheeks stung with the obviousness of that and went on burning as Hewitt said, "May I help?"

"Why, certainly," she said. "If you'd like."

She hurried through the dining room into the pantry, switched on the light and was peering blindly into the refrigerator when Hewitt came up behind her. She was thinking excitedly, "I'm not doing any of the things I thought I'd do when I saw Hewitt again. For I had to see him again, of course."

She was remembering that in the three days that had just passed she had seen herself meeting Hewitt on the street, passing him with a cold, disdainful little nod. She had seen herself answering the telephone, heard herself saying, "I'm terribly sorry, Hewitt, but I'm dated up for this week. . . ."

They were prideful pictures. They weren't a thing like the Peg Patterson who stood here in this kitchen with her heart thumping, a mingling of gladness and hope in her eyes, her face burningly hot and her knees so weak beneath her that she could hardly stand.

Hewitt stood very close to her, but he was being careful not to touch her. She was aware that he wanted to.

"Peg, why did you run out on us at the office?"

She reached in the refrigerator and took out a bowl of oranges and carefully placed them on the sink. She said, with a calmness that she was far from feeling: "Because I opened the stairway-shaft door. I saw you kissing Thalia Polk on the steps. I thought I never wanted to see you again."

Hewitt Explains

Hewitt said evenly, "So that was it." And for a moment he said nothing else. He took a long time lighting a cigarette, in deciding on a place to toss the match. "And I don't suppose it will do a bit of good to say that it didn't mean anything, will it, Peg?"

Peg was fumbling in a drawer for a knife now. She didn't look up because suddenly her eyes were shut against tears. "Just what did it mean, Hewitt?"

"Nothing," he said, flatly, "except that she has an exciting mouth. That she wanted me to kiss her. That I've kissed her before. A great many times. But that was before I met you, Peg. My kissing Thalia then or now has had nothing to do with love, Peg. Not being a man you probably won't understand that."

Peg was still fumbling blindly in the drawer. Hewitt came up behind her, reached past her and picked a bread knife from the mass of cutlery which she had thoroughly confused in her blind plucking. He cut the oranges in half for her, reached up on the shelf and brought down a glass juicer.

"Where's the pitcher?" he said.

Peg took an orangeade set from the glass cupboard. She took it over to Hewitt and put it on the sink. "We'll need some sugar and some ice cubes," she said. "You'll like our cubes, Hewitt. I put a little disc in the water and it turns them pink and blue." And she would have moved away.

But Hewitt had her wrist. He was pulling her to him. "Why are we fooling with this damned orangeade? Why are we acting like two people who aren't sure of themselves? Of what they want? How can we be doing something with oranges when we want to be in each other's arms? . . . When we've got to be. Oh, Peg . . ."

Then his arms were around her, holding her close to him. His lips were on the curve of her throat, her cheek, the light brown cloud of her hair. He went on, huskily, "Peg, I never knew quite how much I cared until I spent two whole days without seeing you. Oh, I know we've been separated before. When I went away on business. But this wasn't the same. This time it was you who were gone . . ." He paused a moment, drawing her closer. "Peg, when will you marry me? Tonight? Tomorrow?" But she didn't have a chance to answer. His lips were on hers.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

King's Visit Means Entente, Says Tinkham

U. S. No 'Pawn' of Britain, Says Bay State Member

By International News Service.

Representative George Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, suggested that the visit of the King and Queen of England to the United States "confirms an entente or military understanding between the British government and President Roosevelt for preservation of the British Empire at the expense of American blood and treasure."

He declared in a prepared statement that, both in Europe and Asia, it is "commonly believed that such an understanding and alliance has been made."

Under such circumstances, he termed it "incumbent upon the President and the Secretary of State to make public proclamation of United States neutrality in Europe and Asia, and the freedom of the United States from any alliance, written or spoken."

If the Government's executive officers fail to make such affirmation, Tinkham declared, "it is then incumbent upon Congress by resolution to give notice to the world and reassurance to the people in this Nation that the United States is not the pawn and ally of the British Empire."

In diplomacy, as well as in historic perspective, Tinkham said such a visit of a reigning monarch, to the head of another nation, is "not a private visit, but an affair of state."

He cited various historic royal visits to France, which, he declared, were almost invariably accompanied by political commitments, and frequently followed by war. He pointed also to the 1908 visit of the King of England to Russia, and added:

"It is a fact of record that the political understanding between the Russian and British empires coincided with that royal visit. Six years later that understanding or entente brought Russia into the World War as the alley of Great Brtiain."

Tinkham said the visit "comes at a time when heavy war clouds overhang the British Empire, when Europe is on the brink of war, and when the course which the United States shall follow in the event of European war is of uppermost concern—to us and to Europe."

Cadets Will Vie In Saint John's Drill Contest

Eight companies of cadets will compete in the twenty-fourth annual drill of St. John's College at 9:15 a. m. today on the Ellipse, south of the White House. The winning company will receive a silver cup from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, retaining possession for one year.

Company commanders are Capt. Edward Viehmeyer, Capt. Frank Daly, Capt. Judson Lincoln, Capt. Robert Schwartz, Capt. William Orsinger, Capt. Louis Knight, Capt. Robert Boyle and Capt. Vernon Poore.

Captain of the winning company will receive a gold medal. Judges for the competition will be regular Army officers from Fort Myer. Cadet Col. Edgar Jenkins is commander of the regiment.

Girl, 13, Feared Kidnaped, Tells of Hobo Wandering

New York, May 21 (AP).—Tired and hungry, 13-year-old Isla Aylesworth, Queens schoolgirl, returned to her parents today with a vague story of wandering with a young hobo and by herself since she disappeared Thursday near the New York World's Fair.

Searching parties had scoured a woodland where she and a man were last seen in belief she might have been kidnaped.

First Lady's Dress Ready For Royalty

Blue Wool Made in Pact With Queen Has Only White Pique Trimming

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 21.—To a young American designer, Clare Potter, has been entrusted the task of designing the blue wool costume which Mrs. Roosevelt will wear when King George VI and Queen Elizabeth arrive in Washington June 8, and the President and his wife meet them at the Union Station.

The Queen likewise will be wearing pale blue wool, according to the reciprocal fashion pact entered upon by the two first ladies to display the gift of the wool industry of the other's nation.

Queen Elizabeth's blue wool has been designed and made by Norman Hartnell, London dressmaker who creates everything Her Majesty wears. Fashion experts will be waiting to compare and contrast every detail of the two costumes.

If Clare Potter had any professional nervousness about this assignment, there was no sign of it in her manner when she admitted Mrs. Roosevelt's gown was finished.

"Yes, it's all done and Mrs. Roosevelt has had her one and only fitting," the designer said happily. "It is just what I call an 'easy dress,' the kind she likes, informal and comfortable. It has a full-flared skirt, a yoked blouse and a three-quarter-length sleeve with some shoulder interest. Its only trimming is a white pique collar, to match her hat, which also will be trimmed with white pique."

Mrs. Potter admitted Mrs. Roosevelt had very little to say about her costume, although when the reciprocal-fashion agreement was first announced she was told she might consult with the designer.

Mrs. Roosevelt was busier than usual, however, about to depart on a second trip to Seattle, and finally left the entire matter to Mrs. Potter, stipulating merely that it was to be as comfortable and cool as possible, in case June 8 should do its worst in Washington.

Watchmakers' Lives Are Long, Free of Eye-Strain, They Say

Horologists, Whose Convention Opens Here Today, Declare American Timepieces Are Equal to Best in the World for the Money

If you want a long life, free from eye-strain, join the watchmaker's trade, described as one of the last professions where pride of craftsmanship refuses to give way to modern mechanized impersonality.

According to members of the Horological Institute of America, here for their annual meeting at the Roger Smith Hotel today and tomorrow, watchmakers retain the medieval guild tradition of fine individual work, ply their trade primarily because they love it and would be unhappy at any other work, and live to much riper and more active old ages than the average person.

As for ruining their eyes, the contrary is the fact. All work is done with a magnifying glass, which spares the eyes. Reading is more of a strain and the horologist's optical exercise actually strengthens eye muscles, the instrument makers claim.

Watchmakers—by which are meant the skilled craftsmen in the jewlery store who can actually build or rebuild a timepiece, and not workers in factories producing watches—are individualists to a degree and so far have proved impervious to unionism, according to John J. Bowen, an institute advisory council member who operates a watchmakers school in Lancaster, Pa.

He added that a true watchmaker must be born one first, albeit he also has to be made by long schooling. No one race have a monopoly on the profession, he says, although the Swedes seem to produce an exceptionally large number of skilled mechanics.

Bowen insists that American watches are the finest made for the money anywhere, excelling a Swiss timepiece at the same price.

"If you have $50 to $100 to spend on a watch, buy American," he says. "But if you want to spend $1,000 go to Switzerland."

American craftsmen could, if there were any point to it, make just as fine and expensive a watch as the Swiss, he notes. But since Switzerland makes enough of the super-super variety to supply the small world market, Americans go in for accurate pieces to sell at a modest sum.

Although dime-sized watches are now being produced on a commercial basis, Bowman and his colleagues believe that the trend is toward larger watches. They say it goes in cycles. Thin and minute watches were the craze 150 years ago, they point out. Later the nearer the watch was to the size of a fist, the better it was supposed to be. In recent years, timepieces have become smaller again, but they'll probably grow, the horologists say.

No spectacular innovations are expected in the style of watches in the next few years, institute members believe. Talk of setting watches by radio control is stuff and nonsense, they say, and the fundamental principle still remains that watches should be made to keep time, not to shred cabbage, figure income tax or croon torch songs.

The institute's sessions will be held in the Academy of Science Building, beginning at 10 a. m. today and concluding tomorrow afternoon.

D. C. Accountant Loses 'Friend,' Car and $1,500

Harry L. Budd, 1314 Tenth street northwest, thought he had a real friends in a 22-year-old youth he met in Florida several weeks ago, until he awoke Saturday to find the "friend," his automobile, money, clothing and $1,500 worth of negotiable stocks and bonds missing.

An accountant, Budd told police he ran into the youth on the streets here last week after having met him in the South, and took the boy home.

Two Great-Grandmothers See Maryland Girl, 6, Confirmed

One great-grandmother wept for joy and a second great-grandmother watched with hidden emotions as a 6-year-old Silver Spring, Md., girl took her first communion yesterday.

More than 200 parents witnessed the rites for their children at St. Michael's Catholic Church, Silver Spring. But for the two elderly Washington women the occasion marked a milestone in a mother's life.

Mrs. Ada Gaskins, of 320 Webster street northwest, who will be 80 within two weeks, has witnessed first communion for 25 grandchildren. Five times Mrs. Mary A. Gaskins, 81, of 831 Whittier street northwest, has experienced a similar joy. Yesterday they saw the first communion of their great-grandchild.

Tears of happiness rolled down the cheeks of Mrs. Ada Gaskins as Doris DeNeane, 6, marched to the altar. She whispered: "I've seen many joys and sorrows among my 25 grandchildren, but today I am happy to pray for the future of my great-grandchild."

Doris is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Edwin DeNeane, of 812 Roeder road, Silver Spring. Mrs. Ada Gaskins is her paternal, and Mrs. Mary Gaskins her maternal great-grandmother.

Also attending the communion were Doris' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilder DeNeane, of 823 Randolph street northwest, and Mrs. Doris Kelly, of 831 Whittier street northwest.

The two great-grandmothers, the two grandmothers and the grandfather, all in good health, ate a family breakfast at the home of Doris' parents in Silver Spring. Later they attended the May procession of St. Michael's parochial school.

Sen. Glass Refuses Immunity Waiver In Eakins Dispute

By the Associated Press.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, told an interviewer last night J. Ross Eakin's suggestion that he waive his senatorial immunity in connection with statements concerning Ross' superintendency of Great Smoky Mountain Park seemed to him "absolutely asinine."

He said he told Eakin so yesterday in a letter of reply. "I couldn't waive immunity if I wanted to," Glass said.

The veteran Virginan said that when the Interior Department appropriation bill was considered by the Senate, it seemed "perfectly natural" to him to ask why Secertary Ickes should transfer Eakin from Smoky Mountain to Shenandoah Park, in Glass' State, in view of the criticism directed against Eakin's administration of Smoky Mountain by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee. The order for the transfer was later rescinded.

Postlude

Hamline Methodist Church presents Dvorak's "Stabat Mater," sung by the Hamline Choir, under the direction of John H. Marville. Soloists: Ethel Stickles, Mabel Flehr, John Murphy, Ernest Livingston and John Marville. Organist: Lyman McCrary.

To John H. Marville, who selected the unfamiliar composition as one worthy of restoration after long neglect, and to the singers of the Hamline Choir, who had prepared the work for public presentation, many music lovers were indebted yesterday afternoon for acquaintance with Antonin Dvorak's setting of the medieval Latin poem, "Stabat Mater." The director and his choristers must have felt that their efforts had been well repaid, for Hamline Methodist Church was filled for the occasion.

Mr. Marville's search of records has revealed no previous performance of this impressive choral work in Washington, and he is in all probability right in asserting that it was offered here for the first time. He could have gone further and claimed that yesterday's performance was one of the very few ever given in the United States, for I can testify that during a long experience with oratorios I had never heard the work before, my knowledge of it having been confined to readings of the score.

Considering the merits of Dvorak's sincere and moving treatment of the text, it is surprising that his version has been so consistently overlooked, usually in favor of Rossini's theatrical and operatic "Stabat Mater." It is customary to excuse Rossini for his vocal ornamentations and lively rhythms on the ground that he was essentially a man of the theater and that he wrote religious music in the only way he knew. But Dvorak was also a man of the theater to the extent of seven operas, yet he did not allow his operatic style to influence his music for the church.

In his "Stabat Mater" there are dramatic passages, to be sure, but they are consistent with the text and their emotional quality is spiritual. The setting of "Quis est homo" for solo quartet, as an example, employs devices similar to operatic procedure, but the effect is not in the least theatrical. The chorus, "Tui Nati Vulnerati," has a secular movement of melody and rhythm, but its devotional character is unmistakable.

The difference between Rossini and Dvorak in this particular is best seen in the "Inflammatus et accensus." Both composers set these lines for solo voice, Rossini for soprano and Dvorak for alto. Rossini's treatment is sensationally florid and operatic, while Dvorak's is cogently dramatic and reverential.

Whatever may have been the motivating cause for Rossini's "Stabat Mater," Dvorak composed his version under the weight of grief for the death of a child, and this personal sorrow is evident in certain poignancies of the music. Throughout the oratorio, Dvorak's characteristics as a composer—his navete, his honesty, his feeling for melodic beauty—are present. The choral writing is always admirable for its structural solidity and its harmonic richness. The oratorio is a materly work, strong in its technical form and powerful in its spiritual force, and one is grateful to Mr. Marville and his choir for the opportunity to hear it.
